RTE Vaccine Fraud

RTE's shameful dereliction of duty during the Covid era has guaranteed its inevitable demise

It's finally dawning on many Irish people that the state broadcaster has been feeding them a daily diet of lies and propaganda about the 'virus' to terrify them into submission. When they waken up in their hundreds of thousands, the Duffys, Byrnes and Tubridys of this world will no longer be able to walk down the street.

The odious crimes they have committed in failing to fulfil their essential remit as publicly-funded journalists - to protect and defend the security, freedoms and values of the Irish people - amounts to nothing less than treason and must be regarded with commensurate gravity.

Like low-life drug pushers, they have hawked the deadly needle night and day on behalf of criminal Big Pharma and are directly responsible for the countless deaths of those who foolishly took the poisonous soup.

In a different era, and not that long ago, rogue journalists would have been hanged for placing Ireland and her people in grievous peril and playing a key role in the destruction of their lives.

EDITORIAL

Those who abandoned the channel years ago had observed the creeping narrative which would serve to render Ireland unrecognisable to the country we once knew.

At first the signs were subtle: a touch of political correctness here, a hardline man-hating feminist there, a Catholic-basher in the back row.

Mostly, this was treated by the public with indulgence: 'Political correctness gone mad!' we would proclaim, not realising we were observing the early stages of the capture of our education system followed by the capture of our country. In fact, we were witnessing the early manifestations of Cultural Marxism, an ideology pledged to create dissension and division within the nations of the West with a view to rendering them amenable to ideological conquest.

What we have observed emphatically in the past 19 months is the transformation of our 'national broadcaster' into a fully-fledged bridgehead of the New World Order dictatorship in Ireland not merely offering itself as an unquestioning conduit of the propaganda of those who would dispossess and enslave our people - but actively working to suppress and demonise anyone with the effrontery to question these drifts and raise their voices in defence of the right of the Irish People to their freedom.

This reached its apogee recently with Joe Duffy (annual salary €400,000+) leading a vicious, highly personalised and defamatory attack on the editor of this newspaper, followed by the stalking of her in her home by RTE agents issuing spurious and infantile threats.

Their manic behaviour is an indication that they know the game is up, their lies have been found out and they are cornered rats on a sinking ship.

For decades, RTE has been in breach of even its own ethical charter which clearly states that 'all relevant facts and available information should be weighed to provide the most accurate, fair and objective report,' not to 'present factual material in a way that will materially mislead the audience,' and above all to approach its responsibilities in a spirit of impartiality and 'not unduly favour one perspective over another.'

These undertakings have long since been abandoned. RTE no longer exists to serve the public but the interests of puppet politicians, Big Tech/Pharma and other powerful lobby groups and NGOs seeking to embed 'One World' totalitarianism, censorship and the destruction of all the values we associate with the free West.

The channel reached a new low when globalist spin doctor Jon Williams, a Liverpoolian with no understanding of Ireland, was put in charge of News shortly after President Trump was elected in 2016. A former foreign editor at ABC and

Vaccines have killed thousands in Ireland

THE staggering death toll from Covid vaccines has surpassed that of the Northern Ireland Troubles, which took 3,500 lives.

The killer injections are being linked to an extra 500 deaths a month in the Republic or an excess of 16 per day above normal. This represents an increase in mortality rates of approximately 20% for the year so far.

During the summer, deaths in Ireland surged at a time when they should be lowest with an estimated 800 surplus, during the season.

This wave began almost as soon as the vaccine rollout was launched in January. There was an excess of almost 1200 deaths above normal in the first two months of this year.

The horrifying figures come at a time when the genocidal needle is being brutally pushed upon children by the terrorist regime that has taken over the country.

The explosion in deaths tallies with what is happening world-wide.

An analysis of the UK's Office National Statistics reveals 33,000 excess deaths in January and February 2021 alone.

The RIP.ie website is witnessing an alarming rise in death notices using the terms 'sudden' or 'unexpected'. This usually indicates that the deceased had no known serious illness.

If they were previously unwell, the notice typically reads 'died peacefully' or 'after a long illness'. Likewise, the term 'tragic death' generally indicates events such as motor accidents or suicide.

In comparison to previous years, there has been a very marked increase in the use of terms such as 'died suddenly' in the past year.

A stark parallel can be found in Northern Ireland where the current death rate is running at 25% above normal.

For every death, there are also many casualties and victims of the vaccine who are left permanently disabled. The HPRA (Health Products Regulatory Authority) - the vaccine licensing authority in Ireland - has admitted that up to October 26, there have been 90 deaths and 15,705 injuries caused by the vaccine but this is believed to represent just

1% of overall injuries, which more often than not are unreported.

In recent months, hospital A&E's across Ireland have been inundated with 'vaccine' injured patients. In early September during the warm late summer weather there were 460 people on hospital trolleys nationwide one morning.

The inescapable irony is that counties with the highest rates of 'Covid' such as Waterford and Carlow also have the highest rates of vaccination in the country - because vaccine adverse events are being recorded as Covid.

The most heinous aspect of this genocide unfolding before our eyes is the impact of the vaccine on children and youngsters in their 20s who are at much greater risk of injury.

A recent scientific study by University of Ottawa Heart Institute in Canada showed that Covid vaccines have, in just a few months, caused Myocarditis in 1 out of every 1000 children. The condition, which is extremely rare in children, can lead to heart failure and knock years of a child's life expectancy.

Unfortunately, hundreds of thousands of healthy children over the age of 12 have already been given the experimental injection with the younger children under 12 now being targeted by the State.

The boosters which are currently being offered to elderly and vulnerable people, will, in all likelihood, make the previous death figures look modest. Thousands more will die before the year is out.

The public is being softened up and conditioned to expect carnage, with a litany of fake explanations to cover up what is really going on and talk of bad flu on the horizon, so-called breakthrough cases and new variants - anything but the truth of this nightmare which is that the deadly injection is doing exactly what it was supposed to.

BBC, he proved a loyal slave to his warmongering masters concocting fabricated narratives of fear to justify their illegal invasions in countries they sought to subjugate.

Williams was sent to Ireland as a special saboteur to weaken our fibre and annihilate our culture rendering us a soft touch for the globalist neo-colonists. Doling out a toxic menu of fabricated stories about the benefits of vaccines, mass immigration, reaching zero carbon and the LGBT++ lifestyle, his function has been to create division and confusion in a once highly cohesive society and shatter it into pieces.

For many years, people like Joe Duffy and Ryan Tubridy have exhibited consistent contempt towards the claim of the Irish people to possess and to cleave to their own dear land, their birthright and their children's birthright, disparaging and belittling the notion of a metaphysical bond between this island and its people. In recent times, Duffy has once again used his privileged public position to attack those who have shown him up for the blackguard he is, and Tubridy - who is supposed not to express political opinions in public

- was recently heard to declare that people who have declined the lethal Covid injection should be disinvented from family weddings.

So what might an actual public service broadcaster have looked like over the past 18 months?

From the outset, it would have conducted a robust challenge to what the government and health authorities were inflicting on our country. It would have questioned the legal and scientific basis of lockdown measures. It would have sent its journalists out daily to official press conferences to harry and assail those who claimed the right to paralyse our country and deliver its people into despair. It would have interrogated nightly the alleged mortality figures, the 'case numbers' achieved using a bogus test, the ludicrous projections of 'scientists' about future mortality. And it would have given a platform - as its own Charter requires it to do - to those voices seeking to raise questions of a scientific, legal, medical and humane character so as, at the very least, to ensure that the necessity, legality and proportionality of these measures was tested on a daily basis over the past approximately 600 horrific days.

Where have been the stories about the people who have lost

THE MEDIA IS LYING

UDO ULFKOTTE EDITOR OF LEADING EUROPEAN NEWSPAPER DIED SHORTLY AFTER THIS CONFESSION:

“I've been a journalist for 25 years. I was taught to lie, betray and never tell the truth to the public. I was paid by the CIA, secret societies and American billionaires. Journalists are used to manipulate the people.”

everything because of the insane lockdown policy? Where are the "national broadcaster's" nightly reports of the businesses built up over several lifetimes that have been destroyed? Where were their reports of the old people who have died alone, without doctor or priest or the touch of a loving child or grandchild - many prematurely killed by orchestrated stress and inappropriate use of sedatives to bolster the Covid mortality statistics?

What about the brutalised citizens hounded and harassed by an out-of-control police force for trying to defend their freedoms or even maintain the merest fabric of their lives? Where, in recent months, have been their reports on the innumerable people dropping dead from vaccine injuries, or their interviews with the many families left bereaved by these deaths?

Where are they? Where are the national broadcaster's investigations into NPHET? Into the conflicts of interest of some of the key propagandists who have driven the bogus Covid narrative for the past 19 months?

The stuff of real journalism resides in standing up for those who are unable to stand up for themselves — not parroting the clichés and catchwords of the World Economic Forum and the would-be New World Order. Not mounting daily attacks on those few individuals, voluntarily and pro bono, who have tried to continue flying the flag of true journalism by highlighting the unbelievable attacks on humanity and human freedom in what will soon be known as the 'Covid years'.

Joe Duffy, Claire Byrne, Miriam

O'Callaghan and Ryan Tubridy were given a sacred function, as the ringmasters of our public conversation. Instead of carrying out their roles with due solemnity and diligence, prioritising at all times the best interests of the Irish people who pay their lavish salaries, they abused their positions to attack the very fabric of our nation and recklessly endanger life by pushing the killer vaccine.

When the present era of rancid corruption comes to an end — and it will, sooner or later - they must be brought to justice and, as with the political class, be handed down life sentences without prospect of parole. And the Lie Factory in Donnybrook will be razed to the ground replaced by a memorial park dedicated to freedom and free speech so that generations to come might never forget the heinous crimes against truth and the Irish people that once took place there.

A brief history and the future of money

CBDC's will mean unlimited control over our lives

FOR thousands of years, money - the conceptual unit of account that we represent with the generally physical, tangible objects we call currency - has been chiefly embodied in the form of coins struck from precious metals.

The adjective 'precious' - referring to the fundamental limit on availability established by how difficult it was to find and dig up the commodity out of the ground - was important, because, well, everyone cheats: the buyer in the marketplace shaves down his metal coin and saves up the scraps, the seller in the marketplace weighs the metal coin on dishonest scales, and the minter of the coin, who is usually the regent, or the State, dilutes the preciousness of the coin's metal with less valuable materials, to say nothing of other methods.

The history of banking is in many ways the history of this dilution, as governments soon discovered that through mere diktat they could declare that everyone within their borders had to accept that this year's coins were equal to last year's, even if the new coins had less silver and more lead.

In many countries, the penalties for casting doubt on this system, even for pointing out the adulteration, was asset-seizure at best, and at worst hanging, beheading or death by fire.

In Imperial Rome, this currency degradation, which today might be described as 'financial innovation', would go on to fund previously unaffordable policies and forever wars, leading eventually to the Crisis of the Third Century and Diocletian's Edict on Maximum Prices, which outlived the collapse of the Roman economy and the empire itself in an appropriately memorable way.

by EDWARD SNOWDEN

Tired of carrying around weighty bags of dinar and denarii, post-third-century merchants, particularly travelling merchants, created more symbolic forms of currency, and so created commercial banking - the populist version of royal absent old physical token, at first.

Just as America's old paper silver certificate could once be exchanged for a shiny, one-ounce silver dollar, the balance of digital dollars displayed on your phone banking app can today still be redeemed at a commercial bank for one printed green napkin, so long as that bank remains solvent or retains its depository insurance.

your purse, the bank no longer gets to decide, or even know, how and where you use it. Also, the napkin will still work when the power grid fails.

Advocates of Central Bank Digital Currencies (CBDC's) contend that these strictly-centralised currencies are the realisation of a bold new standard - not a gold standard, or a silver standard, or even a blockchain standard, but 'disintermediation', constitute the heart of the matter, and it is notable how reliant the Federal Reserve Board's Christopher Waller is on these terms, whose origins can be found not in capitalist policy, but ironically, in Marxist critique. What they mean is: who or what stands between your money and your intentions for it?

What some economists have lately taken to calling 'decentralised cryptocurrencies' - meaning Bitcoin, Ethereum, and others - are regarded by both central and commercial banks as dangerous disintermediators; precisely because they've been designed to ensure equal protection for all users, with no special privileges extended to the State.

This 'crypto' - whose very technology was primarily created in order to correct the centralisation that now threatens it - was, generally is, and should be constitutionally unconcerned with who possesses it and uses it for what purpose. To traditional banks, however, not to mention states with sovereign currencies, this is unacceptable.

These upstart crypto competitors represent an epochal disruption, promising the possibility of storing and moving verifiable value, independent of state approval, and so placing their users beyond the reach of Rome.

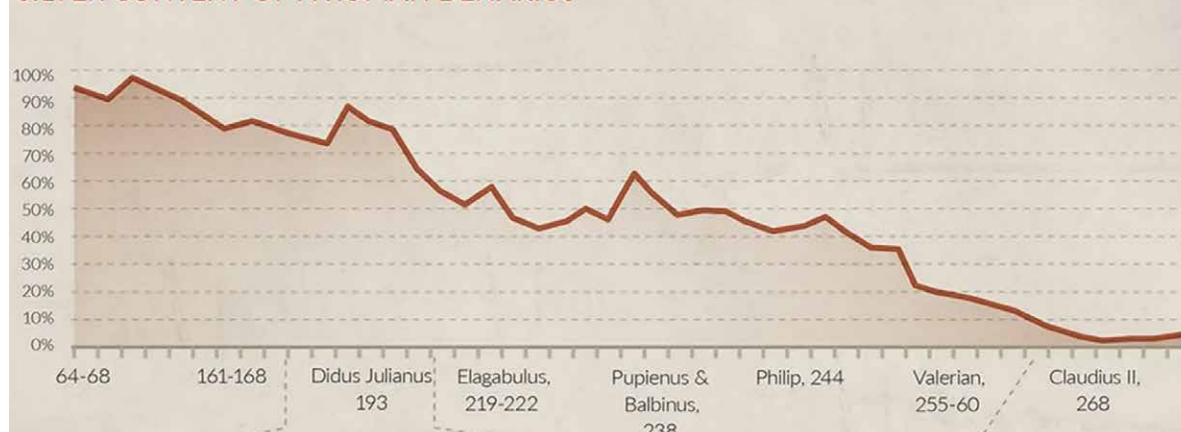

Opposition to such free trade is all too often concealed beneath a veneer of paternalistic concern, with the state claiming that in the absence of its own loving intermediation, the market will inevitably devolve into unlawful gambling dens and fleshpots rife with tax fraud, drug deals, and gun-running.

It is difficult to countenance this claim, however, when according to none other than the Office of Terrorist Financing and Financial Crimes at the U.S. Department of the Treasury: "Although virtual currencies are used for illicit transactions, the volume is small compared to the volume of illicit activity through traditional financial services".

Traditional financial services, of course, being the very face and definition of 'intermediation' - services that seek to extract for themselves a piece of our every exchange.

treasuries - whose most important early instruments were institutional promissory notes, which did not have their own intrinsic value but were 'backed' by a commodity.

They were pieces of parchment and paper that represented the right to be exchanged for some amount of a more-or-less intrinsically valuable coinage.

The regimes that emerged from the fires of Rome extended this concept to establish their own convertible currencies, and tiny shreds of rag circulated within the economy alongside their identical-in-symbolic-value, but distinct-in-intrinsic-value, coin equivalents.

Beginning with an increase in printing paper notes, continuing with the cancellation of the right to exchange them for coinage, and culminating in the zinc-and-copper debasement of the coinage itself, city-states and later enterprising nation-states finally achieved what the Fed would generously describe as 'sovereign currency': a handsome napkin.

Once currency is understood in this way, it is a short hop from napkin to network. The principle is the same: the new digital token circulates alongside the increasingly-

Should that promise-of-redemption seem a cold comfort, you would do well to remember that the napkin in your wallet is still better than what you traded it for: a mere claim on a napkin for your wallet. Also, once that napkin is securely stowed away in something like a spreadsheet standard, where every central bank-issued dollar is held by a central bank-managed account, recorded in a vast 'ledger-of-state' that can be continuously scrutinised and eternally revised.

CBDC proponents claim that this will make everyday transactions both safer (by removing counterparty risk), and easier to tax (by rendering it impossible to hide money from the government).

CBDC opponents, however, argue that an e-dollar, say, is merely an extension to, or financial manifestation of, the ever-encroaching surveillance state. To these critics, the method by which this proposal eradicates bankruptcy fallout and tax dodgers draws a bright red line under its deadly flaw: these only come at the cost of placing the state, newly privy to the use and custodianship of every dollar, at the centre of monetary interaction.

Look at China, the napkin-clingers cry, where the new ban on Bitcoin, along with the release of the digital yuan, is clearly intended to increase the ability of the state to 'intermediate' - to impose itself in the middle of every last transaction.

'Intermediation', and its opposite

WHY GOLD?

Ludwig Von Mises' Infinite Regression Theorem posits that nobody enforced gold and silver as money by decree. Rather, as productivity and trade increased in variance and volume, the most barterable, sought-after commodities became precious metals, for reasons which may have been obscured today:

Rarity (compared to salt or pebbles)
Fungibility (gold is always gold if it's pure)

Portability
Divisibility
Durability

Invite people to question before making a decision

I RECENTLY saw a video of a guy standing outside a school with a megaphone saying, "Don't get the vaccine" to a crowd of young people. The school staff were taken aback and told the students to move away.

One of the many problems with the government's covid vaccine campaign is the active discouragement of everyone, including children, to educate themselves so that they are able to give as well-informed a decision as possible. Instead, the campaigns have a clear message that everyone should take it without thinking about it.

Furthermore, the government has ruled that children aged between 12 and 15 can overrule their parents if they want to have the vaccine and their parents don't consent.

They use the 'Gillick competence' test to determine whether the child is mature enough to make the decision. But how can anyone make an informed choice without information?

The problem with the megaphone guy was that he was once again telling the students what to do instead of encouraging them to think for themselves. Who should they believe? Some random man on a megaphone or their teachers and parents?

We have this bizarre situation now where everyone thinks they know what we all should do. The majority think that everyone should get vaccinated (because they have been pumped with that idea by the corporate media) and a minority think that nobody should get vaccinated, leaving an even smaller minority that think that everyone should make their own minds up, having weighed up the risks and benefits.

To know that everyone should or should not vaccinate would require knowledge of each individual's circumstances and a thorough understanding, not just of virology, epidemiology, vaccines and medicine, but also of political science, logic and economics.

Even if you have weighed up the data and you think that for children the risks outweigh the benefits, there may be some children who are vulnerable or who have become so traumatised by the government

by DANNY SHINE

propaganda, that it may be best for them to take the vaccine just to give them some peace of mind.

I propose therefore, that instead of telling young people not to take the vaccine, we encourage them and their parents to inform themselves as best they can and make their choices based on knowledge.

If covid sceptics go outside schools with leaflets containing a

There is a metric in medicine called 'Number Needed to Treat'

These policies may be crimes against humanity

A 'PHYSICIANS Declaration' produced by an international alliance of doctors and medical scientists strongly condemns the worldwide strategy to treat covid.

It accuses policy-makers of potential 'crimes against humanity' for preventing physicians from providing life-saving treatments for their patients and suppressing open scientific discussion.

The document states that 'one size fits all' treatment recommendations have resulted in needless illness and death.

By the 14th of October, the declaration had garnered more than 12,000 signatures from doctors and scientists across the world.

It was produced by a group of physicians and scientists meeting in Rome for a three-day 'Global Covid Summit' to speak "truth to power about covid pandemic research and treatment".

The summit gave the medical professionals an opportunity to compare studies, and assess the efficacy of the various treatments developed in hospitals, doctors' offices and research labs throughout the world.

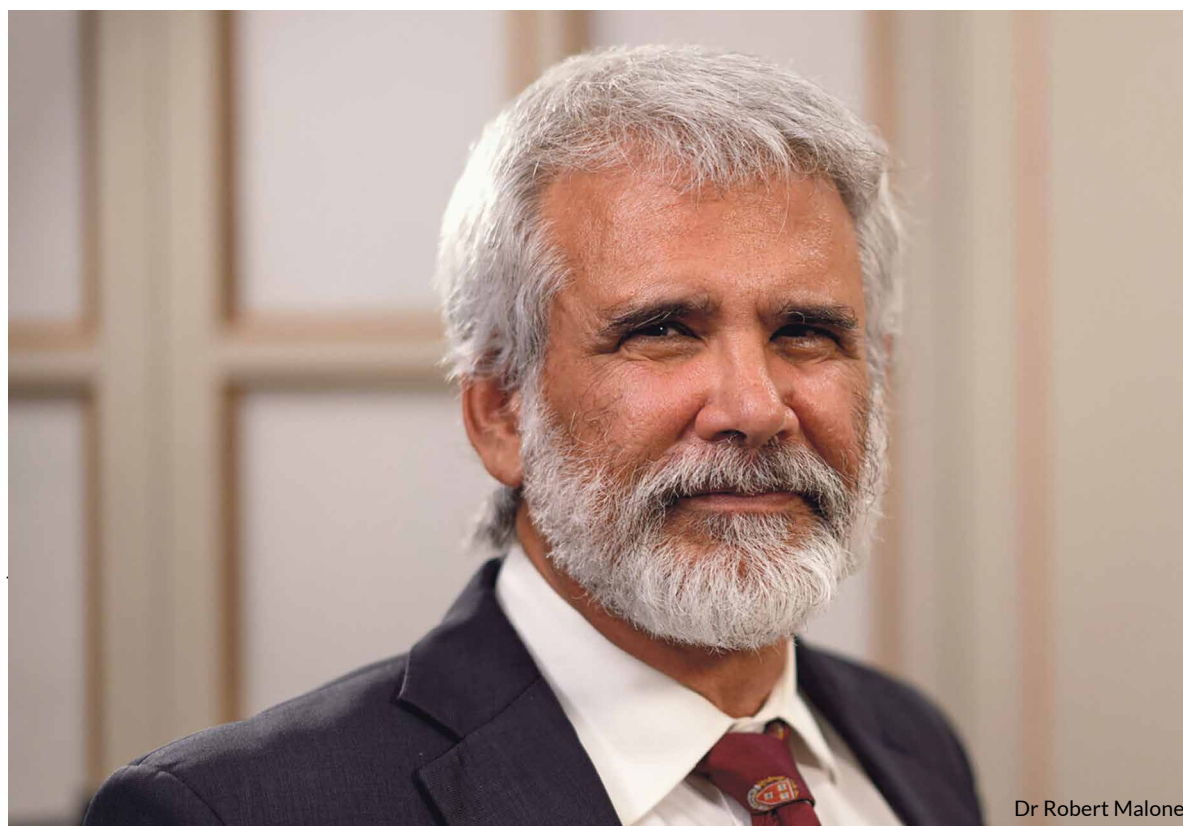

The Physicians' Declaration was first read at the Rome Covid Summit, catalysing an explosion of active support from medical scientists and physicians internationally.

These professionals were not expecting career threats, character assassination, papers and research to be censored, social media accounts blocked, search results manipulated, clinical trials and patient observations ignored, and their professional history and accomplishments altered or omitted in academic and mainstream media.

Dr Robert Malone, architect of the mRNA vaccine platform, read the Rome Declaration at the Summit:

"Thousands have died from covid as a result of being denied life-saving early treatment. The declaration is a battle cry from physicians who are daily fighting for the right to treat their patients, and the right of patients to receive those treatments – without fear of interference, retribution or censorship by government, pharmacies, pharmaceutical corporations, and big tech.

More than 12,000 doctors and scientists sign declaration

Dr Robert Malone

"We demand that these groups step aside and honour the sanctity and integrity of the patient-physician relationship, the fundamental maxim 'First Do No Harm', and the freedom of patients and physicians to make informed medical decisions. Lives depend on it.

"We, the physicians of the world, united and loyal to the Hippocratic Oath, recognising the profession of medicine as we know it is at a crossroad, are compelled to declare the following:

"Whereas, it is our utmost responsibility and duty to uphold and restore the dignity, integrity, art and science of medicine;

"Whereas, there is an unprecedented assault on our ability to care for our patients;

"Whereas, public policy makers have chosen to force a 'one size fits all' treatment strategy, resulting in needless illness and death, rather than upholding fundamental concepts of the individualised, personalised approach to patient care which is proven to be safe and more effective;

"Whereas, physicians and other health-care providers working on the front lines, utilising their knowledge of epidemiology, pathophysiology and pharmacology, are often first to identify new, potentially life-saving treatments;

"Whereas, physicians are increasingly being discouraged from engaging in open professional discourse and the exchange of ideas about new and emerging diseases, not only endangering the essence of the medical profession, but more importantly, more tragically, the lives of our patients;

"Whereas, thousands of physicians are being prevented from providing treatment to their patients, as a result of barriers put up by pharmacies, hospitals, and public health agencies, rendering the vast majority of healthcare providers helpless to protect their patients in the face of disease.

"Physicians are now advising their patients to simply go home and return when their disease worsens, resulting in hundreds of thousands of unnecessary patient deaths, due to failure-to-treat;

"Whereas, this is not medicine. This is not care. These policies may actually constitute crimes against humanity.

"Now therefore it is:

"Resolved, that the physician-to-patient relationship must be restored. The very heart of medicine is this relationship, which allows physicians to best understand their patients and their illnesses, to formulate treatments that give the best chance for success, while the patient is an active participant in their care.

"Resolved, that the political intrusion into the practice of medicine and the physician/patient relationship must end. Physicians, and all health-care providers, must be free to practise the art and science of medicine without fear of retribution, censorship, slander, or disciplinary action, including possible loss of licensure and hospital privileges, loss of insurance contracts and interference from government entities and organisations - which further prevent us from caring for patients in need. More than ever, the right and ability to exchange objective scientific findings, which further our understanding of disease, must be protected.

"Resolved, that physicians must defend their right to prescribe treatment, observing the tenet 'First Do No Harm'.

Physicians shall not be restricted from prescribing safe and effective treatments. These restrictions continue to cause unnecessary sickness and death. The rights of patients, after being fully informed about the risks and benefits of each option, must be restored to receive those treatments.

"Resolved, that we invite physicians of the world and all health-care providers to join us in this noble cause as we endeavour to restore trust, integrity and professionalism to the practice of medicine.

"Resolved, that we invite the scientists of the world, who are skilled in biomedical research and uphold the highest ethical and moral standards, to insist on their ability to conduct and publish objective, empirical research without fear of reprisal upon their careers, reputations and livelihoods.

"Resolved, that we invite patients, who believe in the importance of the physician-patient relationship and the ability to be active participants in their care, to demand access to science-based medical care".

MPs' interests leave the public feeling conflicted

PERHAPS the 'year of global opportunities' Chris Whitty was predicting in an interview with Civil Service World in 2020 related to his involvement with Global Health Group, a self-proclaimed specialist supplier of covid-19 medical supplies.

Maybe he was one of their well-placed 'influencers' in the industry, as their website describes how they provide access to 'leading experts' that build bridges between 'top tier buyers, sellers and investors'.

Matt Hancock also had the same entrepreneurial mindset when he was gifted 15% shares in his sister's document-shredding business, Topwood Limited.

This family-owned company, which gained NHS approved status in 2019, recently benefited from £300,000 worth of business from NHS Wales. The company, with assets valued at near £2 million, also claimed up to £20,000 in Coronavirus Job Retention Scheme grants.

Mr Hancock and the Department of Health and Social Care (DHSC) were also scrutinised for their NHS procurement strategy during the pandemic. A High Court judge, Mr Justice Chamberlain, ruled the former health secretary's actions unlawful. This is largely due to failings in publishing the vast majority of £15 billion worth of PPE and services within a 30-day period.

This misuse of public money was highlighted by the procurement consultancy Tussell and challenged in court by the Good Law Project, a not-for-profit organisation bringing legal challenges that show transparency laws are being broken by the government.

Not wanting to be alone in the cronyism, Hancock repeatedly and publicly backed a company for which Dominic Cummings undertook a consultancy role in 2018. Boris Johnson's chief advisor during the pandemic faced conflict of interest accusations over this role for Babylon Health, a government-endorsed healthcare business that introduced the controversial GP at Hand app. Cummings advised Babylon Health on its communications strategy and its senior recruitment, an investigation by The Guardian and the Bureau of Investigative Journalism revealed.

by WILL BURNS

Nadim Zahawi, secretary of state for education, has also sparked controversy with his family links to Warren Health Limited. Although the company never traded, it led to conflict-of-interest questions from the Stratford Herald. The paper argued that the inclusion of the word 'medical' in the new company's name sounded inappropriate, given Mr Zahawi's position at the time, as vaccine minister.

The Department for Health and Social Care responded to questions by the Stratford Herald with an unequivocal 'no conflict of interest' statement. However, how much scrutiny has been placed on Zahawi's other business interests? His wife and twin sons are directors in companies Zahawi & Zahawi Ltd - with assets of £54 million according to confirmation statements, as well as Zahawi Properties Ltd, Zahawi Brierley Ltd and Zahawi Wantage Ltd.

Perhaps Sir Peter Bottomley, the Conservative MP for Worthing West and Father of the House of Commons, was right when he described MPs' pay as 'really grim'? Which could explain their need to look for extra income.

After all, the annual adjustment to MPs' basic pay for 2020-21 was only increased by 3.1%, as recommended by the Independent Parliamentary Standards Authority, bringing the overall salary from £79,468 to £81,932, from April last year.

Chief medical officer, Professor Whitty earns more, at between £205,000 and £210,000, judging by NHS figures published last year.

Former chief adviser Mr Cummings was paid £140,000-£144,999 - up from £95,000-£99,999 the previous year. A cabinet office report revealed the adviser was given a pay rise of around 40% from 2019 to 2020.

MPs can also claim expenses such as travel, office, food, drink and accommodation.

MPs are in the top 5% of earners in the UK when it comes to annual income, judging by HMRC taxpayer data from 2016-17. This does not even take into account their overall wealth, such as fixed assets and business interests.

When you take into account the national average UK wage of around £30,000, and nurses, on an average of £26,000 per year, according to payscale.com, it is hard to believe assertions of poverty from any member of parliament.

Despite the wealth that ministers and their families have amassed, there are no shortages of reports of conflicts of interest during the pandemic, such as UK chief scientific adviser Patrick Vallance having £600,000 of shares in vaccine maker Glaxosmithkline.

There are likely to be many more examples of public office being used for private gain. The apparent prevalence of conflict of interests is alarming. Intriguingly, it is mostly happening in plain sight, right under the taxpayers' noses.

A cursory amount of research on HMRC or the government's own conflicts of interest reports shows that there is still a deep, underlying issue of cronyism. Yet when politicians are quizzed about their seemingly controversial business interests, there are usually all-too-familiar party lines - 'there is no conflict of interest', and 'no laws were broken'. Which is probably true, which can mean only one thing - the law itself is broken.

There is also theoretical transparency in UK politics to stop this kind of cronyism of the past. That is why we have the National Audit Office, conflict of interest declarations, transparency policy, and above all else, we have parliament. Parliament's job, in their own words, is to scrutinise government so that any decision they make is fair, open, transparent, workable and non-discriminatory. It would appear that parliament has spectacularly failed. The inevitable result of decades of endemic corruption is widespread mediocrity.

Whether any person or company should make a profit from the pandemic is an ethical question. When so many sacrifices were made by the people, giving up freedoms, giving up socialising, wearing masks, getting injected, losing their livelihoods, it does not seem right for someone to make a monetary profit upon that situation.

One question that needs immediate addressing is: should anyone connected to government be able to profit in any way from the pandemic?

When people profit from a crisis their morals are questionable. This is usually associated with wartime profiteering. Henry Ford once said 'Show me who makes a profit from war, and I'll show you how to stop the war'. Replace 'war' with 'pandemic' and we may be seeing history repeat itself.

Hardy's reminder our souls are rooted in nature

by SIMON HEATHCOTE

THERE is an irony, probably forever lost on all but a few, that to really gain insight into what The Fourth Industrial Revolution (4IR) is now forcing upon us, we could do worse than return to the novels and poetry of Thomas Hardy, famed West Country author.

In his Wessex novels, particularly Tess, The Mayor of Casterbridge, Far from the Madding Crowd and Jude the Obscure, we are witness to history in motion, the slow yet inevitable cleaving of people from land; the decimation of a way of life.

The death throes of the 19th century marked the beginning of the end of a bucolic Britain, which existed both as rural idyll and as harsh reality of life on the land, and an even harsher transition to a smoggy industrialisation.

Families were separated (like now), mass production began to kick in and the new mechanical age segregated people from their roots, nature and the life of the soul.

If you research The 4IR (initially a book written by Klaus Schwab of the World Economic Forum, now a proud page on the UK government's website), you will understand that in some ways things have not changed much. The plan is to relocate country dwellers to modern 'smart' high-rise cities, whether they like it or not.

The irony I mentioned earlier is that to properly access the mournful wisdom of Hardy, also a proto-feminist – certainly through the eyes of his heroine Tess – you would be advised to read his books.

But as this industrial revolution is about speed not soul, placing virtual reality in your hands, not actual ground beneath your feet, that is unlikely to happen. This is another ending of a way of life – unless we truly and quickly come to our senses – which only its proponents and advocates view as a good thing.

In truth, the digitised/AI agenda is only good for what are called 'stakeholders' in a rather cowardly new world. We can already see who they are: big pharma, big corporations, corporatised governments, in fact anyone willing to sell their soul for a buck, and whose blood fits.

The rest of us, whether we realise it yet or not, do not have a place in the New World Order.

Schwab, who also wrote and published 'Covid-19: The Great Reset' as early as July 2020, was both arrogant and bold enough to make it clear that coronavirus was a relatively minor problem but would be the excuse needed to push forward this deadly scheme.

Another irony: it is being sold as a green agenda, so has the sheen of goodness ever to bamboozle the innocent, just as they have been tricked over current medical interventions. 'This may hurt, but it's all for your own good,' is the kind of watchword psychopaths specialise in. The tragedy is that those who grew up with narcissists at the helm have much sharper insight than those who still naively believe their care-givers would never harm them. It is a belief - a need even - that many will cling to unto death.

The notion of a dire, soulless, malevolent patriarchy is not a new one and Hardy's proto-feminism, the treatment of his heroines, tells us that. The clown that is Boris Johnson suckered millions, his hateful eugenics in no way obvious (his father Stanley wrote a number of books on depopulation and worked for Planned Parenthood when junior was just an unpleasant schoolboy).

As Ray Liotta's narrator in Goodfellas tells us, "your killers come with smiles".

As Hardy writes in Tess: "The beauty or ugliness of a character lay not only in its achievements, but in its aims and impulses; its true history lay, not among things done, but among things willed".

Everything feeds the machine, an insatiable, loveless demon erected as demiurge by abused, pitiable boys tragically handed the keys to the kingdom and now bent on revenge.

Yet instead of seeking it among their abusers, they instead target the ordinary man or woman who never did them harm, while keeping the corrupt system alive, including all its horrors of paedophilia and ritual abuse.

What happened to the inquiry into the Westminster child-rape scandal? As Bojo disgustingly put it, why "spaff" all that money up the wall of history?

And yet history is where we might learn our lessons, avoid calamity and the consequent Nuremberg trials and drag the demons into the light. It is surely no coincidence that those pulling the strings of their government puppets worldwide are hidden from scrutiny.

We may take a guess at who they are, may even be aware of some, yet it seems most stay in the shadows, like vampires awaiting a fresh supply of blood.

In Hardy, the land is all and people are fused with it, as if he had inherited an indigenous bloodline that knew no person can own land. If anything, we belong to it.

As he writes in Under the Greenwood Tree: "To dwellers in a wood, almost every species of tree has its voice as well as its feature".

All parties are part of one dictatorship

“BY retaining the forms, institutions and ceremonies of our parliamentary heritage, though now rendered meaningless, the magnitude of the constitutional convulsion has been successfully disguised” - Ben Greene, ‘The Party System and the Corruption of Parliament’.

Do you know how party politicians stole the vital role of the Sovereign? They seized control through their party system and deceived us by calling it ‘democracy’.

Their system forces you to choose a manifesto package and to accept all of it or none of it, or not vote. They call it democracy, but the description is a lie. It is only suffrage. (See www.democracydefined.org).

They created ‘whips’, offices that ensure their party representative in your constituency votes as ordered by the leadership (and where are they getting their orders from, if clearly not the people?)

Showing their contempt for you,

by JOHN CRUTTWELL

we read: “as long as we backbenchers vote the way the whips tell us, nobody cares much what happens during the debate,” Julian Critchley MP (Con), Readers Digest, November 1989.

Even if you did not vote for the winning party, it becomes the government and has complete power over you, because the system is designed that way.

It then taxes you whether you can afford it or not. Political opportunists wait for lucrative contracts from government which spends your money (HS2 for example), because the party system is the centralisation of power.

It borrows money with interest (known as usury) and burdens you and your children with the debt. It controls your child’s education, yet Ofsted forgot to tell them of their freedoms granted to us by God.

You cannot withdraw consent to any part of this manifesto because you voted ‘yes’ to the system – just by being on the electoral roll.

Can you understand now what Lord Hailsham meant by the expression ‘elective dictatorship’? All parties are part of this dictatorship, waiting their turn in power. “Once gained, a parliamentary majority has the potential for tyranny” (Hailsham). Especially regarding matters outside the manifesto and depending on the ruthlessness of the leader.

All the parties reward obedient followers with peerages. The House of Lords conspired to remove ‘Royal Assent’ from the monarch. Queen Victoria in 1854 was our last monarch allowed to assent in person. So, in 1953 our Queen’s sacred Coronation Oath to the British people to “govern according to our laws and customs” is made void, because party politicians claim their being “elected by the people” makes the Sovereign subordinate. Therefore, the MPs’ oath of loyalty is also meaningless.

In this way, all parties, including Conservative, are part of the revolution against our constitution and our freedom. Simply by voting for any party you confirm your consent to this cleverly disguised fiction.

You may be outraged at these claims, but then please consider where your ‘knowledge’ about how the political system works came from, and who controls it.

If you would like to consider how to break this stranglehold, kindly e-mail me:

and of course keep reading
The Light paper.

‘Hate speech’ pensioner jailed for 32 months

What would George Orwell make of it?

CORNISH musician and radio host Graham Hart has been sentenced to 32 months in prison for eight counts of ‘hate speech’ at Truro Crown Court.

The 69-year-old pleaded guilty to ‘producing a programme likely to stir up racial hatred’ but maintains he was just ‘mouthing off’, rather than intending to cause harm to anyone.

Mr Hart started broadcasting back in 2016. He aired his views, chatted with guests about a variety of subjects, questioned significant events throughout history and shared his research findings with listeners around the world.

Central to the prosecution’s case was a dossier compiled by pressure group ‘Campaign Against Anti-Semitism’, by LOUIZE SMALL

which referenced material from Mr Hart’s radio shows, focusing on a song called ‘The Hoax Train’, which urges people to question the official account of the Holocaust and ‘wake up’.

Police raided his house shortly after the song’s online release. They gathered a ‘Free Palestine’ T-shirt, a German family heirloom and some books, lent to him by friends, as evidence. Arrest followed swiftly once investigators began listening to Mr Hart’s shows. He was denied medication for chronic, painful health conditions while held in custody and lost 11lbs in 10 days.

Mr Hart’s relatives are shocked at the length of his sentence and his treatment. They say he started the radio show from his music studio because he wanted to let off steam. His daughter believes he has been made an example of for being outspoken with his unorthodox views. The family worry about his health and how he will cope in prison but are reassured that he seems to be doing okay.

In addition to his prison term, Mr Hart is banned from broadcasting for 10 years.

While his opinions may seem radical, surely he is entitled to them? How does it harm anybody else for him to have a different view of history? Can people not decide for themselves whether they will take or leave the information?

A statement on Campaign Against Anti-Semitism’s website said: “Graham Hart, 69, of Penponds, Camborne, was charged earlier this year with five counts of using offending words or behaviour in a programme involving threatening, abusive or insulting visual images or sounds which was included in a programme produced with intent or likely to stir up racial hatred. Three further charges arose from comments that Mr Hart made on another radio show in late December 2020.”

His sentence poses serious questions about censorship and freedom of speech and is reminiscent of the story of 92-year-old German Holocaust revisionist Ursula Haverbeck, who received multiple sentences from different courts and is now spending time in prison for holding alternative views about the WW2 persecution of Jewish people.

Holocaust denial is illegal in 17 countries. The UK, along with Sweden, Denmark and Italy, has rejected such laws but prosecution is still possible by bringing charges for other related offences. Spain declared genocide denial laws unconstitutional in 2007.

And what of the ‘hate speech’ aspect? Does Muslim and refugee-bashing not become a national pastime when whipped-up by the media? What about the scorn poured on politicians, vegans or those who do not wish to be part of a medical experiment: are not those groups subject to ‘hate speech’? Nobody is in prison for using harsh words against them.

In his much-cited dystopian novel,

1984, Orwell describes ‘thoughtcrime’ as politically controversial or negative thoughts, doubts and beliefs that oppose party dogma. The aim of the government in the prophetic novel is to eradicate individuality and freedom of thought, instead promoting Communism (IngSoc) and mindless obedience as the only acceptable way of life.

Of course, inciting people to violence in the name of anything is rarely a good idea but Mr Hart insists that his passion for the truth got the better of him and nobody was hurt or harmed by his sharing his opinion with his very niche audience.

The court case following Mr Hart’s trial of a child molester who had groomed and sexually abused two young sisters. The defendant was given a three-year suspended sentence and returned to the community for treatment. Mr Hart’s daughter remarked that, “the scales of justice are all wrong”.

Why we win

Humanity cannot be steered – it unfolds

A MURMURATION of starlings is a wonder of nature, managed beyond the comprehension of human organisation.

A computer can replicate the spontaneous beauty in cold mimicry, but it will never grasp the motivation that has compelled the starling for eons.

We may understand the many varied micro-adjustments taking place and how they are transmitted throughout the flock; but it cannot be choreographed by a board of directors. Top-down organisation weakens the initiative of the individual and creates dependency. A dependent population is at the whim of the organiser and devoid of instinctive life.

Progress is the result of natural processes. It occurs as a result of human requirement; it grows from need, informed by necessity. What is not required fails. What arrives too early is cautiously tested. What comes too late is useless. If we override this self-regulating, natural process - forcing the unnatural, it is we who must adapt to the want of progress. The human now secondary to product and commerce - business. Those businesses directed by private interest.

In his books, Klaus Schwab displays a desperate need to steer the world rather than let it unfold. An astute observer can recognise complex business contracts, lobbying and outright racketeering provide the thrust behind many of the developments on the World Economic Forum wish list. Yet Klaus presents the Fourth Industrial Revolution as if it were both organic and inevitable. That we must change ourselves to make way for it.

It is madness to assume that any committee can administrate all of humanity's needs, interactions and growth. To monitor and judge its evolution like a business plan. A pompous coalition of Big Business and Big Government cannot hijack a thing so nuanced and complex as progress.

by STUART FARR

No amount of paperwork, planning or statistics can reproduce the effortless grace of natural order. People cannot be streamlined to fit a mathematical description of success. Any group attempting to seize control of the natural impetus of life will ultimately fail.

Schwab is so out of touch with the warmth of human cooperation that his open commitment to commandeer the 21st century displays nothing short of contempt for the people he shares the Earth with.

What is at stake is the unfathomable brilliance of our achievements being lost to a small gang of criminals. A cartel of maniacs with a grotesque belief in their own self-importance and a profoundly impaired world view. But corruption destroys from within. Not only joined in battle with the splendour of the universe, but forced to partner with a similar class of predatory human; each one bent on serving themselves above each other.

Defeat is rarely due to external forces over which we have no control, but to our own selfishness, ignorance and cowardice. These failings are enduring characteristics of the deviant class.

From such disadvantage, how can they suppress a people—who possess morality and rectitude? With an instinct for survival and resourcefulness and camaraderie and hope... is it not in fact we who are the elite?

If hairdressers are accurate public health monitors...

by GRAHAM CRAWFORD

YOU have all probably heard the saying 'if you want to know what's going on, ask a taxi driver'.

Makes perfect sense; they are out and about all the time, observing the world and chatting to people.

Well, here is a new one for you – hairdressers. Ask them.

I had a very interesting conversation with my hairdresser recently.

Let us call her Louise. She is in her late 30s and has not been 'vaccinated' for covid. Not because she is particularly well-researched. It is mainly because she is stubborn, she says, though I think it is a bit of female intuition as well.

Anyway, she told me of some disturbing health trends she has noticed among her clients.

Older women, previously solidly built, are now "skin and bones".

Thinking they may have cancer, they have gone to the doctor and had all the hospital tests.

They have been told cancer is not the problem, but given no other explanation.

Maybe this is why hospitals are under so much pressure, despite 'covid' admissions being lower.

Here are other things Louise is hearing from her customers that might also explain our busier medical services.

She is being told more about Bell's palsy.

She is hearing more about tinnitus.

About blood clots. About arthritis that has become more severe.

She is aware of three female customers in their 50s who recently suffered heart attacks.

She has also heard of young men in her area who have had strokes.

She is also seeing a dramatic increase in the number of people experiencing hair loss. Well, your regular hairdresser is not going to miss spotting that.

She also told me that many people are saying they have "not felt right" since being injected against covid, and that they are adamant they will not be taking another shot.

I'm hearing that too.

I pressed Louise on whether she was sure things seemed different.

Yes, she insisted, sudden health issues were popping up more than ever.

Think about it. What is usually the first thing your friendly hairdresser asks when you sit down in front of them?

'How are you... how have you been... are you well?'

They may well be the perfect barometer for reporting the nation's health, and based on Louise's experience the diagnosis is not good.

Now, what she says means nothing unless we know her experience is being mirrored by others like her.

Only then we might be onto something significant.

Again in the interest of balance and fairness, perhaps the mass experimental vaccination programme is not actually the cause or is only part of the possible problem.

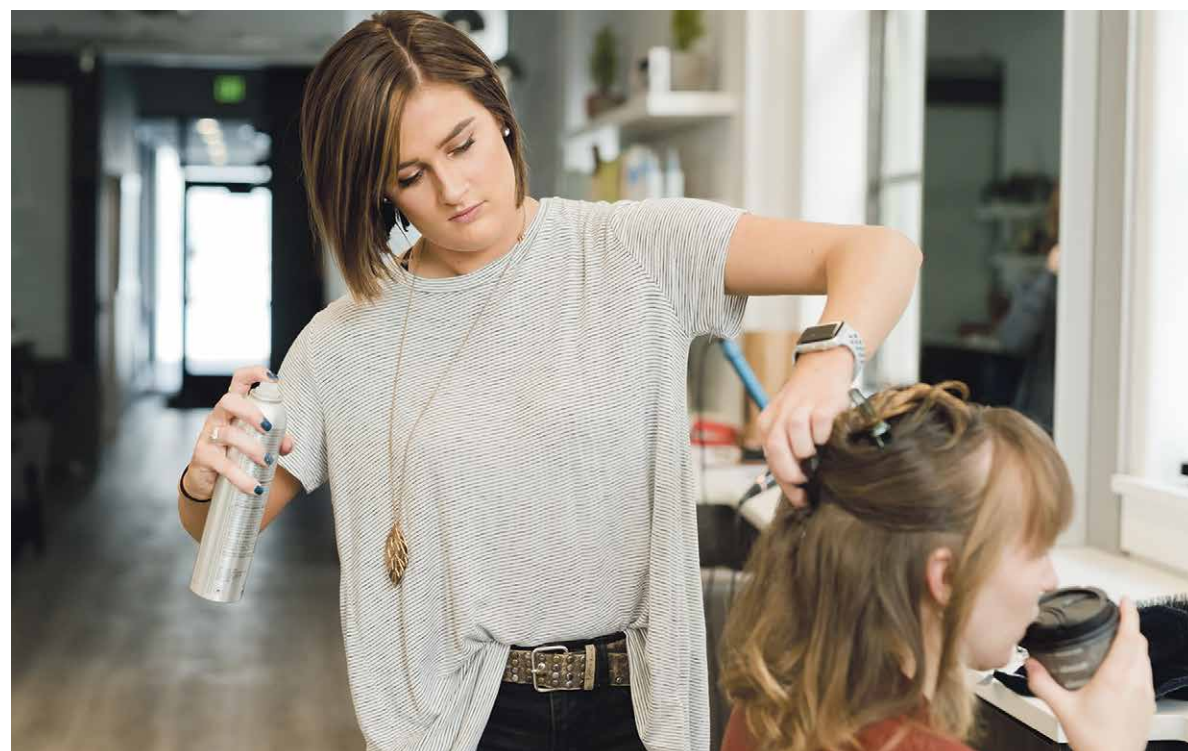

Perhaps there could be another key trigger for a rise in serious health issues: stress. Unnatural levels of stress among people who have lived daily on a psychological edge for 18 months under an unrelenting and unchallenged barrage of fear and anxiety-inducing messages from the government, its 'scientific' advisers, the BBC and the rest of the mainstream media.

And, as a result of lengthy lockdowns and other measures, it has primarily been suffered without access to our usual de-stressors such as ready contact with family and friends, hugs and many social and recreational activities.

It has been a protracted on-edge experience unprecedented outside of wartime, and further heightened by the alleged 'enemy' being invisible and possibly hiding in those all around us, including our colleagues, neighbours, friends and loved ones.

If you have any doubts of the many serious health dangers of stress, I would suggest reading Gabor Mate's excellent book 'When the Body Says No: The Cost of Hidden Stress'.

If nothing else, you might take steps to change your lifestyle for the better. Including switching off the news for good.

Government plans for control through a ‘Never Normal’ policy

SAGE professor's report invokes vision of a covid 'Case Finder General'

‘CASE finders’ and a permanent change in schools, work and public spaces will embed covid permanently in the culture, establishing new routines, norms and identities in the same way that masking changes our relationships.

Disrupting and reshaping society is at the heart of new research from the Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies (SAGE) member Professor Susan Michie, just published by the British Psychological Society.

While banks, pharma, social media and the defence sector continue their drive for control - planners show evidence that risk aversion is becoming a universal mindset.

Fear generated among the public is increasingly a projection of spectres that plague the official mind.

The popular theory of outcomes management is driving politicians and otherwise ‘adult’ officials to a Hegelian hysteria as they struggle and fail to meet the unflinching demands of the powers that call the tune.

If you are hoping that getting the covid shot - or even the vaccine passport - will return you to normal life, think again. Governments are planning for Never Normal.

Psychologists are working out how to ‘embed’ population control measures over the long term. The plan is to establish ‘new identities’ and to motivate a broad change in behaviour that will create a new culture.

The proposals were revealed in a report by Prof Michie on August 31. She was widely quoted in a June television interview as saying face coverings and social distancing should become permanent. Now we have proof of the plan.

Interventions are graded as normal, easy, attractive, and routine (NEAR), driven by an array of public and private sector organisations rather than a series of separate interventions. Compliance will be monitored to achieve long-term behaviour change.

Reading between the lines, this suggests that stakeholders - in practice the investors (the military industrial complex, banks, pharma, big tech)

by MARK MONEYCIRCUS

rather than the people - will observe, routinely collect organisational metrics, and monitor and research individuals.

Citizens will be subject to randomised trials, natural experiments and time series studies - perhaps like the pilot programme in South Australia that calls people randomly and demands they supply facial recognition, proof of location and vaccination.

are complacent” by “using hard-hitting emotional messaging”.

Michie’s latest proposals include covid-safe schools, offices and public places while creating the “motivation needed to underpin those behaviours”.

Embedding these into everyday routines will require “education, regulation, communications and social marketing”.

In another television appearance, Michie became angry when asked about her four-decades-long membership of the Communist Party. The Independent newspaper college closely tied to the military; King’s, London. Her focus was public attitudes to genetic testing and informed choice. She is head of the Human Behaviour-Change Project funded by the Wellcome Trust.

In 2019 she won the British Psychological Society Research Board’s Lifetime Achievement Award for creating a coherent language of behaviour change.

Michie’s party allegiance might be seen in a different light - more technocrat and social-genetic engineer than red flag-waving will be needed on top of “case finding, supported isolation and border control”. The resonance of the phrase ‘case finding’ is clearly lost on the authors. Perhaps they would not smart at the appointment of a ‘Case Finder General’.

The report says motivations and ‘nudges’ should come at people from multiple directions and sources, and be coordinated and sustained.

The content of the research through Google Scholar is uninspiring and the conclusions are worrying by their apparent superficiality. For example:

“A potentially powerful way of embedding representations of new phenomena is through objectification (Devine-Wright & Devine-Wright, 2009). This involves using a concrete, easily understood metaphor (Wagner, Elejabarrieta & Lahnsteiner, 1995). For instance, the process of aerosol spread can be likened to inhaling someone else’s cigarette smoke and hence generate understanding of the contexts where this is likely and the measures necessary to avoid it.”

Superficial because the measure is not important. Like mandating a mask, it is designed to nudge an outcome.

The desire to prompt behaviour necessitates a simplistic, easily-digestible pretext. You might think that the nudge is the facile tip of a deep and complex policy. Reading Michie’s report you soon realise that it is full of such shallow motivations. Each has a seemingly obvious purpose: you wash hands to keep them clean.

That is the proximate outcome. The aim of that outcome, especially the compounded result of numerous outcomes, is unstated to the population.

Mitigation comes up time and again in the Michie report. Public policy, from education to the workplace, is increasingly concerned with risk avoidance.

Some time in the past decade, German schools celebrated a year in which not a single pupil had drowned. Did they teach them all to swim, a heroic achievement? No. Schools had taught children that water was dangerous: keep away.

The same mindset pervades covid policy. One gets the impression that if there was no deadly virus it would be necessary to invent one.

■ moneycircus.substack.com

Professor Susan Michie (SAGE)

‘Co-production and extensive stakeholder engagement’ means state-corporatism, aka fascism.

Michie, The University College, London, Professor in Psychology and Language Sciences, is part of the team behind the use of fear to make people yield freedom and submit to control on the pretext of covid, a pandemic that in 2020 killed no more than the seasonal flu.

The minutes of SAGE from March 22, 2020 say: “The perceived level of personal threat needs to be increased among those who criticised the presenter’s impertinence, describing Richard Madeley as “a dangerous man”.

This protective attitude towards Michie comes not merely from her status as a government adviser but from her establishment connections.

This communist is no radical outsider. Oxford-educated, her father was a pioneer of artificial intelligence and her mother of in-vitro fertilisation. Her career bears the hallmarks of an insider’s progression between influential positions, for example researching psychology and genetics at a conservative university champion of the proletariat.

In fairness to Michie, it tells us rather more about the true nature and intent of government that it feels not a flicker of unease about communist affiliation when that person is working towards the same goals of total control of the people.

Michie’s report, ‘Staying covid-safe: Proposals for embedding behaviours that protect against covid-19 transmission in the UK’, written with five others, begins from the assumptive leap that covid is for ever, because of variants.

Covid-protective behaviours

Welcome to 2031: I own myself, have privacy..

..and life has never been better

A LOT has changed in recent years... the covid power grab compelled everyone to stand up and make their own choices before someone else did it for them. Luckily we snapped out of our collective stupor in time to take full responsibility for ourselves.

Owning property is essential for living creatures to provide safety and security for themselves. Like a bird has its own nest which it defends from other birds and predators. Now ten years later, privacy and property are respected as a fundamental aspect of our humanity.

Life has become easier, more affordable. Fiat currency is void. Central Banks have been abolished. Gold from the reserves were released to the market and inflation is minimal. The gold standard is not perfect, but it is far safer than the absurd way we let private banks force interest rates and manufacture inflation. Sure there were some inconveniences, and we had to give up a few luxuries. These were small sacrifices compared to the top-down control we were suffering.

Bigotry and prejudice are relics of the old way as we realised our differences were being exploited for profit and control by a class of maniacs that had co-opted our natural state and parked their preoccupations in our minds through a culture of psychological marketing.

All journalism is now open source, the free market does not allow dishonesty to flourish. Censorship is impossible. Corporate media are still broadcasting traumatic propaganda, but they are treated as drug dealers. You are free to take as much poison as you like, it is your choice. Not many people bother with either drugs or TV anymore. They are niche interests the youth enjoy experimenting with, but everyone grows out of it.

The tech industry has been restrained from introducing pernicious, harmfully addictive products to the minds of children.

by STUART FARR

Only open source, ethical companies thrive in today's market. Collecting and selling data is anathema to our modern sensibilities. The Big Data market went bust because our desire for privacy became more profitable.

Mental health issues have declined since nobody feels the pressure to live up to inhuman standards perpetuated by compulsive social media routines. Working life is more fulfilling and balanced, humans are in control of their workdays rather than being a commodity rinsed out from 9 till 5 with the weekend off to unwind.

Food is almost all locally produced, organic and fresh. Poisonous additives, pesticides and preservatives are illegal. Intensive farming, mass production and ultra-processed industrial foodstuff cause so much harm they are considered a crime. Geo-engineering is recognised as a war crime, along with GMOs and glyphosate.

There were some psychopaths bathing the Earth in untested microwaves, beamed from everywhere. It is funny to think just how close we came to frying ourselves for quicker downloads. Those idiots are in prison now, but they are still worshipped in the 'Dumbghettos'.

The ghettos are an archipelago of 'smart villages' modelled on the panopticon discipline system. Some devotees of government overreach found they could not handle responsibility.

They voluntarily moved into these concrete reservations to live out their addiction to dominance, control and surveillance. They are the least of humanity. Wretched weaklings with barely a mind between them. Drones in a hive. 100% of them have cancer, but it is considered a thing of pride; a sign of devotion to the 'transhumanist struggle'.

They wear colour-coded badges to show the advancement of their tumours. Behavioural modifiers delivered through the BrainWire™ encourage them to clap for those with the biggest cancer score.

Weaponised mind control disguised as search engines are illegal in the real world, but a simulation of Google (remember Google?) still operates in the Dumbghettos.

The most healthy among the ghetto inhabitants are sponsored by the FAANG LARP Corp (Facebook, Apple, Amazon, Netflix, Google - Live Action Role Play). Some allow their cognitive functions to be tapped by the corporation and become a 'human cloud' to help with herd processing. They earn tokens for this. The rest subsist on handouts generated by artificial intelligence (a simulated government).

Sometimes I feel bad for all the 'frontline workers' and health care professionals who went to jail after The Covid Trials. But they chose to put their jobs and reputation above the welfare of the people. Millions of treatable patients were left to die, committed suicide, suffered severe mental health problems. Children were forced to die alone, kept from their parents.

Old and vulnerable grandparents were given DNR notices and sedated in a form of 'legal' euthanasia. Refusing critical medical help to naturally immune patients because they earned commission on the gene therapy injection. All in the name of a mild virus that 99.9+% of us survived. They have the rest of their lives to reflect on their actions. Nobody claps for them.

Anyway... life for the rest of us is awesome. Not much sickness these days as the research into the cause of disease is very well-funded and the hammering of symptoms with chemicals is unheard of.

Most of the Big Pharma corporations were devastated by the backlog of prosecutions when indemnity was lifted. Today's medicine production is ethical, rigorous and prioritises care using ancient knowledge. Only pure, safe remedies are available because you go straight to prison if you intentionally or knowingly cause any harm.

But enough of my enthusiasm...

Scientists warn government over Fluoride

Three British scientists slam statement on fluoridation of drinking water and have written to Boris Johnson

ACCORDING to three British scientists (Vyvyan Howard, MB, ChB, PhD, Spedding Micklem, PhD, and Paul Connett, PhD) who have followed the debate closely for many years, "This is not a good time for the British government to mislead the public on the dangers posed by the practice of water fluoridation."

They point to a recent statement from the four chief medical officers of Health for England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland, which was given prominent coverage in the British corporate media. Their statement extols the weak benefits of this practice for teeth but ignores the far stronger evidence that fluoride damages the developing brain.

According to Howard, Micklem and Connett, "The dental lobby has controlled this debate for far too long. You can repair a damaged tooth but early damage to the brain (especially during fetal development and infancy) cannot be repaired or reversed. This is so serious for the future of our country that the matter should not be resolved by the kind of 'sleight of hand' used by those who wrote the script for the CMOs' statement."

This "sleight of hand" occurred in the two short paragraphs that dealt with the risks of the practice. The CMOs write:

"There are adverse associations between much higher levels of natural fluoride in drinking water and the prevalence of dental mottling, referred to as dental fluorosis..."

"There are some weaker studies, which claim an association with hip fracture, Down's syndrome, kidney stones, bladder cancer or osteosarcoma (a cancer of the bone).

by FLUORIDE ACTION NETWORK

However, there is conflicting evidence to support these claims and prevailing public health opinion is now that there is no significant association between water fluoridation and these conditions. [23 September 2021]"

Note that the CMOs failed to mention the many human (over 60) and animal studies that indicate that fluoride is neurotoxic, even though this subject has engaged the serious attention of the National Toxicology Program in the USA for nearly five years. Nor that the U.S. EPA is currently being sued by Food and Water Watch and others in U.S. Federal court to prohibit the deliberate addition of fluoridated chemicals to the public drinking water because of the threat they pose to the developing brain. The judge is expected to issue his ruling in early 2022.

Most significantly, in ignoring these studies on the brain, the CMOs failed to acknowledge the several high-quality U.S. government funded studies published since 2017 (Bashash 2017, 2018; Green, 2019 and Till, 2020) which have found effects on the developing foetus and infant at the very fluoride levels used in artificial water fluoridation schemes. These effects include lowered IQ (between 5 and 9 IQ points reported) and increased ADHD symptoms. These findings make complete nonsense of the CMOs claim that health effects only occur "at much higher levels".

The three British scientists added that, "In our view the way the CMOs treated the health effects posed by fluoridation is a gross dereliction of their duty to protect the health of the British people."

Howard, Micklem and Connett, have explained this alarming new science in an open letter to Boris Johnson calling on him to halt plans to extend water fluoridation to other communities in the UK:

Canada and New Zealand impose vaccines on public sector staff

CANADIAN Prime Minister Justin Trudeau has decided to use whatever political capital he gained from his narrow election victory to finally roll out his government's vaccine mandate, which resembles that of its southern neighbour while going a step further in some important respects.

Trudeau and his government are demanding that all public servants either get vaccinated, or face unpaid leave. This includes all federal workers "in the core public administration" and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Federal contractors including cleaning staff must be vaccinated to gain access to government buildings. The government is also asking that all employees in federally regulated air, rail and marine transportation sectors must establish vaccination policies for their employees that effectively require vaccination.

After October 30, all travellers boarding planes, trains or any marine vessels were required to have their shots. The above-mentioned workers had a few weeks to apply for exemptions - either religious or medical - but otherwise, they will be forced to choose between the jab, or losing their job. This travel mandate also applies to everyone over the age of 12.

Anybody hoping to use public transport this holiday season will need to get the jabs. Any Canadians who aren't comfortable with the vaccine won't be able to fly to visit relatives who live outside driving distance (and they wouldn't be allowed in the U.S., leaving them effectively trapped in their country).

Unvaccinated employees will be barred from going to work, either in person or remotely, and they will be put on administrative leave and denied pay, according to the CBC.

"These travel measures, along with mandatory vaccination for federal employees, are some of the strongest in the world because when it comes to keeping you and your family safe, when it comes to avoiding lockdowns for everyone, this is no time for half measures," Trudeau said.

Employees will be required to sign an 'attestation' form giving their word that they have been vaccinated. Anybody who signs the form can at any time have their vaccine status 'audited' by their managers, who will then seek proof of vaccination.

Bottom line: if you're a federal worker affected by this order, and you decide to lie about your status, definitely don't tell anybody.

One week after Canada adopted mandatory vaccination rules for federal workers and travellers, New Zealand announced its own vaccine mandates for most teachers and health-care workers.

Doctors, nurses and other health-care workers must be fully vaxxed by December 1, while everyone working in education who has contact with students must be vaccinated by January 1.

"We can't leave anything to chance so that's why we are making it mandatory," said covid response minister Chris Hipkins, who is also the country's education minister.

"Vaccination remains our strongest and most effective tool to protect against infection and disease," Hipkins said.

New Zealand briefly enjoyed covid-free status after the initial global outbreak, but the country's 'drawbridge' strategy was unable to keep out the 'delta variant', imposing a lockdown in Auckland, the country's largest city after confirming just a single case. As cases spread despite the tightening restrictions, the government was forced to finally abandon its 'covid zero' strategy.

Despite this, New Zealand PM Jacinda Ardern said the highly transmissible delta variant had proved a "game-changer" that can't be easily eliminated.

Now, keep in mind, New Zealand has confirmed fewer than 5,000 cases and fewer than 30 deaths.

Italy rebels against green pass for all workers

"Trieste chiama, l'Italia risponde" - Trieste calls, Italy responds

MASSIVE demonstrations have erupted throughout Italy as the Italian government pushed further ahead with their 'Green pass'.

Already used for medical apartheid domestically in Italy since June, all workers across Italy were from the 15th of October 'required' to hold the 'green pass' to work, meaning being forced to be vaccinated or take repeated tests, with workers who fail to comply facing fines of over £1200.

This meant chaos across Italy where around 20% of the working population are still vaccine free, with that number much higher in some critical areas of the economy, like at the ports where it is estimated around half of dockworkers are unjabbed.

In the days and weeks that followed the 15th, both unvaccinated and vaccinated Italians rallied together quickly in cities and ports throughout Italy, bringing the cities, towns and especially the ports of Trieste and Genoa almost to a complete standstill.

by JOSH GREGOIRE-JONES

United shoulder to shoulder with a clear message, "La Genta come noi non molla mai" - People like us will never give up.

'REMOVE the implementation of the green pass or we WILL bring Italy to a complete standstill'. Freedom is not up for debate is their demand.

Protests ensued in Ancona, Turin, Bologna, Naples, Genoa, Cessena, Vicenza, Bassano Del Grappa, Aosta, Syracuse, Treviso, Livorno, Catania, Bergamo, Sanremo, Belluno, Ravenna, Palermo, Lecco, Udina, Bolzano, Brescia, La Spezia, Cagliari, Verona, Padua, Pisa, Asti, Florence, Modena, Milan and many other cities in Italy, even including Varese - one of the most vaccinated places in Italy at 91%.

This tyrannical ruling in Italy could have huge consequences for much of Europe; Trieste alone is the supply point of the Transalpine Oil Pipeline which connects Trieste with central Europe and covers the energy needs of 90% of Austria, 50% of the Czech Republic and 40% of the energy needs derived from oil in Germany (100% in Bavaria and Baden-Württemberg).

That's why even the vaccine-supporting International Council of Dockworkers immediately released a statement on the 16th of October showing full support and solidarity with the workers involved in the demonstrations and strikes. In Genoa, the local police officers have been frequenting the squares with food and drink and hugs of support, all united in the stance of freedom.

As we went to print, daily strikes and protests continued, getting ever bigger and more potent. At last, Italy has arrived at the freedom party. A meeting with the government was called for by the 30th October so a discussion about the green pass could be held. Citizens were insisting it happens in Trieste. Why? Because since the 1954 London Treaty, Trieste has been a free territory; it shouldn't fall under Italian jurisdiction, meaning the violent attacks by police on citizens peacefully and rightfully protesting on the 15th weren't just morally wrong, but illegal.

Talks might not be positive though, if they happen at all - the Italian government is a cut above the rest in terms of corruption, fronted by Mario Draghi, ex-banker and big pharma lobbyist - Italy in general is a well-known hotbed of corruption.

No matter what, the support for the anti-Green pass movement in Italy has exploded and solidarity has continued to grow, port strikes are sure to continue, as are the protests and demonstrations in cities across Italy, calling for the abolition of the discriminatory pass and the restoration of the rights and freedoms that citizens had prior to the pandemic.

With all factors considered, including the now immense number of people ready to fight this, the Italian government have one hell of a battle on their hands.

The real reason Japan avoided the ‘pandemic’

I HAVE lived and taught in Japan for 23 years, and have seen this discussed in many places but the real reason Japan seems almost immune to covid is always missed.

Contrary to claims made in a Guardian article, the health system

by /u/logman64

Apart from that life was normal. Everything open. I just could not go to my favourite bar to play darts for a month, big deal. Hard for them, but they also got some compensation. My gym, like all many other things can treat covid, but Japan has not been using it. At least as a matter of policy. I would not be surprised if some doctors prescribed it but generally everyone just toes the line here. There is no dissent from any societal paradigms. So if the government does not say “treat covid with Ivermectin” then I doubt many would.

A full year of a circulating virus, no lockdown, no 100% masking and no treatment protocols like Ivermectin or Hydroxychloroquine. And yet, no pandemic. So why? Two reasons, and no, it is not due to Japanese super-genes.

1. There was no testing. For more than a year it was almost impossible to get a test. You would have to be ill enough with covid symptoms to need hospitalisation. Then you could get a test. No mass testing and what do you know? No virus. Anywhere. Admittedly it has been easier to get tests as time went on but still, there was no test mentality or environment.

My son had an ‘outbreak’ at his school. Someone tested positive, then they tested the whole school and 14 positives turned up. Some family members also tested positive. I had to take two weeks off school - all paid. Out of all the ‘positives’ every single one was asymptomatic. Not even a sniffle. Some virus.

2. This testing mentality permeated all levels of society, even the health-care system. We had very little of this ‘died with covid’ nonsense. The criteria for a covid ‘death’ were dying with bilateral pneumonia and a positive test. You know, the original expression of the disease before it could kill you from anything from a brain aneurysm to a heart attack? If you died in a car wreck or of cancer, you were not tested for covid. Why would you be?

We have not been immune to the epidemic of fear spread by the corporate media. Japanese media play that game too. But it seems the whole Japanese system has yet to be fully ‘captured’. The reason Japan escaped this plague is due to the absent policy of mass testing; nothing more, nothing less.

Now you see how a pandemic can be manufactured. With a dodgy PCR test that gives 95% false positives and a system that drives society to subject itself to said tests regularly. And categorise death on a faulty PCR test that gives 95% false positives (maybe even 99%). Japan proves it. Case closed.

here has never been strained. In the city I live in there are 200,000 people and a lot of hospitals. Of these, only one will accept covid patients, of which there has been none in 20 months. Zero.

People often ask “how did Japan seem to avoid the ‘pandemic’?” Look at the numbers - hardly any deaths. We had no lockdowns, hardly any disruption to life.

In March, the school year ended three weeks early and schools were shut. In April of this year schools were two weeks late opening for the new intake. That was it for school closures.

At certain times we have had a ‘State of Emergency’. One finished at the end of September, having lasted a month. During this time restaurants and bars were asked to close at 8pm. Being a compliant society 95% did just that, even though there were no fines for spurning this ‘request’. In some prefectures, they did pass some laws that enabled them to issue fines to businesses that did not comply.

gyms, has remained open. It is half as busy as it was pre-covid.

So how has Japan avoided all those deaths?

Let us first dispel a myth that it is all about the masks. It is true that people wear masks more often here. I would frequently turn up to school in January or February and the whole class would be masked up. Due to an outbreak of influenza. And you are expected to wear a mask if you are ill. That is Japan for you.

However, people do not wear them for no reason. I remember a trip to the mall in August, 2020. I thought I would conduct a super-scientific social experiment. I counted every person that walked past me and counted how many were wearing masks. It was four in ten, just 40%. It took until about January to see 100% masking up. And it is 100% now. Or 99.95%. But it took that long.

The other myth is the prescription of Ivermectin. Do not get me wrong, I think all the data shows IVM and

Africa appeals to Bill Gates: stop funding the ‘failed’ green revolution

BILLIONS of dollars in aid and subsidies for industrial agriculture in Africa are harming food security in one of the world’s hungriest regions, according to 200 African organisations.

Led by the Alliance for Food Sovereignty in Africa, they have asked the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, the U.S. Agency for International Development and other donors to stop financing the Alliance for a Green Revolution in Africa (AGRA).

The billion-dollar effort has “unequivocally failed in its mission” and “harmed broader efforts to support African farmers”, the groups said. Donors are asked to switch their funding to African-led efforts and agro-ecology.

Hunger has worsened considerably since the Gates and Rockefeller foundations led a high-profile effort to bring the ‘green revolution’ to Africa in 2006. AGRA’s main focus is transitioning farmers away from traditional seeds and crops to commercial seeds, synthetic fertiliser and other inputs to grow commodity crops for the international market.

African faith groups also appealed to the Gates Foundation in June, with a letter signed by 500 faith leaders asking it to stop:

“There’s somebody keen to kill the African Dream.” – James Shikwati, economist and author said. Kenyan Shikwati believes that green ideology is not good for developing nations. In ‘The Great Global Warming Swindle’, a 2007 documentary aired on Channel 4, he stated: “One clear thing that emerges from the whole environmental debate is the point that there’s somebody keen to kill the African Dream [of development].”

He added: “The challenge we have, when we meet Western environmentalists who say we must engage in the use of solar panels and wind energy, is how we can have Africa industrialised; because I don’t see how a solar panel is going to power a steel industry...”

Corporation tax is a giant leap towards a one-world government

LAST month in a triumph for transnationalism, 136 nations including the U.S. agreed to mandate a worldwide corporate income tax for all nations that will not be allowed to fall below 15%.

“Virtually the entire global economy has decided to end the race to the bottom on corporate taxation”, said U.S. treasury secretary Janet Yellen, who negotiated the pact.

Betraying a nervousness as to how such a minimum corporate tax, dictated by globalists, will be received in Congress, Yellen urged that it be adopted “swiftly”. Yellen is right to be nervous.

The tax proposal is a giant leap towards a globalism that America has rejected, and its defeat should be made a priority of libertarians, conservatives, populists and nationalists alike.

What is this “race to the bottom” that so terrifies Yellen and her globalist allies? Simply the worldwide competition of independent nations to offer lower tax rates to entice successful companies to relocate to their shores and bring their jobs with them.

Yellen’s “race to the bottom” is as American as apple pie.

High tax rates, corporate and personal, in states such as New York, New Jersey, Illinois and California have proven to be incentives to companies to pick up and relocate to low-tax states such as Texas and Florida.

That 15% corporate tax rate is designed to prevent this competitive taxation, the beneficiaries of which are companies that have moved to countries such as Ireland, which has a corporate tax rate of 12.5%. The Irish corporate tax rate is less than half of the 28% Yellen and President Joe Biden have in mind to impose on the USA.

Why would free-market and free-enterprise Republicans vote to lock into U.S. law a corporate tax rate dictated by agents of the private central-banking cartel?

To sign on to this 15% minimum tax would be to surrender our freedom to set our own tax rates in accordance with the values and beliefs of the party and administration the people vote into power.

Why would a great nation agree to give up its freedom of action and have its surrender written into its national law and ratified by treaty?

Why forfeit a sovereign right to cut corporate taxes when and to whatever level we wish? Why deny ourselves a competitive advantage that can be gained by unilaterally cutting corporate tax rates?

Assume the rest of the world embraces this minimum corporate tax of 15% and the U.S. - to recapture and restore a manufacturing base given away to China - answered the world with a corporate tax rate of 7% or 8%.

Transnational companies would beat a path back to America’s door.

While globalists might be appalled, why would nationalists give up irrevocably the freedom to act?

In the Trump era, a cut in the U.S. corporate tax rate to 21% helped to create one of the great booms of the modern era, before the pandemic struck in March 2020. Earlier that year, unemployment in all categories was at record lows.

As Ronald Reagan taught, corporations do not pay taxes; they collect them. They get them out of the revenue they receive from the customers who buy their products and services.

The corporate taxes of Ford and General Motors come out of the prices that are charged to buyers of Ford and GM cars and trucks.

And the corporate profits are a primary source of higher wages and salaries, bonuses, and the investment capital companies need to grow and create new jobs.

It is an article of faith among Republicans that lower taxes, personal and corporate, generate greater economic activity and prosperity. And that tax hikes are the ways and means by which rapacious governments consume the seed corn of an economy.

A second provision to which the 136 nations agreed is to have the profits of the world’s largest corporations reallocated to the countries where their goods are sold and services are provided, not to the countries where they are located.

“Under the agreement,” The New York Times writes, “technology giants like Amazon, Facebook and other big global businesses will be required to pay taxes in countries where their goods or services are sold, even if they have no physical presence there.”

Adds the Times: “The separate tax aimed at the technology giants will reallocate more than $125 billion of profits from the home countries of the 100 most profitable firms in the world to the markets where they operate”.

Why would an America First party inside the USA, home country to more tech giants than any other, sign on to a plan that would transfer tax revenue away from the U.S. treasury into the exchequers of foreign lands?

The GOP should use this moment to re-declare our independence when it comes to internal taxation on individuals and institutions in the United States, and reassert that we will decide the proper rates here, and not be subject to the veto of any other nation. The U.S. is not the EU.

Blinken: U.S. policy is to ‘oppose the reconstruction of Syria’

The U.S. has ruled out normalising with Syria

by DAVE DECAMP

SECRETARY of State Antony Blinken has said the U.S. position on Syria is to “oppose the country’s reconstruction and not support any attempts at normalisation with the government of Bashar al-Assad.

At a joint press conference with his Israeli and UAE counterparts, Blinken said the U.S. has not “changed our position to oppose the reconstruction of Syria until there is irreversible progress toward a political solution”.

U.S. sanctions under the Caesar Act against Syria specifically target the energy and construction sectors to impede the country’s ability to rebuild after 10 brutal years of war. The sanctions can target any person regardless of nationality, discouraging Syria’s neighbours from helping in the reconstruction.

On top of the sanctions, the U.S. also maintains an occupation force of about 900 soldiers in eastern Syria and supports the Kurdish-led Syrian Democratic Forces in the region. This area of Syria is where most of the country’s oil fields are, so the U.S. presence keeps vital

More and more Arab countries are accepting that Assad isn’t going anywhere and have taken steps to normalise, including Jordan, which opened its border with Syria in September. Blinken said the U.S. does not intend to “express any support for efforts to normalise relations or rehabilitate Mr. Assad” or lift a “single sanction” unless there is regime change in Damascus.

resources out of the hands of Damascus.

Washington’s economic warfare against Syria is exacerbating the country’s food shortages. According to the UN, as of February, the number of Syrians that are close to starvation is at 12.4 million, or 60 percent of the population.

Satan - lost in translation?

by CHRISTOPHER SPARKES

THE image of a devoted Christian at night would be of reading something from the Bible and making prayers, perhaps kneeling at the side of the bed. So what might Satanists do, Luciferians?

A panicked British broadsheet has been campaigning against ‘conspiracy theories’. For example: “America has been taken over by a Satan worshipping, child-abducting cabal. Like the mythical Beast in Revelations, it has many heads... Hillary Clinton... Bill Gates... George Soros... Oprah Winfrey” (Sunday Telegraph, June 27 2021; book review of The Storm Is Upon Us by Mike Rothschild). Such views, it says, make appeal to “people with brain damage”. Well, it would.

But does their Satan really exist? Are world leaders taking orders from empowering satanic forces? A recent YouTube comment says: “Both obama [sic] and biden [sic] are working for satan and satan’s children.”

In the mythologies of Roman paganism, fictional ‘gods’ conducted evil things among men. Jupiter (also Jove), son of Saturn and Opis, was king of the gods. His Greek equivalent was Zeus.

In the poetical works of Homer, heroes blamed their misdeeds on the ‘gods’. They were the real culprits. Hades, ruler over the dead and the underworld, was cruel and pitiless, silent to any pleading. His realm also was known as Hades. Hermes led dead souls of the wicked to Hades, from where there was no escape.

Jesus had no hesitation in mocking such Hellenistic myths that the priesthood of Jerusalem had swallowed. In his parable of the rich man and Lazarus, Jesus has Abraham say to the rich man: “They have Moses and the prophets. Let them hear those”. (Luke 16/29). In other words, not Hellenistic myths.

When the Bible came to be translated into Latin (c. 390), its editor, Jerome, seeing the Hebrew and Greek words satan and satanas, rather than translating them as ‘enemy’ or ‘adversary’, merely transliterated them to give the name Satan. Yet they are not the names of anybody.

The same happened with the Greek word diabolos, meaning slanderer, not a title of anybody.

At 1 Timothy 3/11 and Titus 2/3 it is clear that diabolos makes reference to human slanderers, slandermongers, transgressing, among other things, the ninth to be regarded as unquestionable orthodoxy. When you say ‘Satan’, you are speaking untranslated Hebrew and Greek words. They need translating. They are not names.

such character. There was no ‘Satan’ in Eden. It just says ‘serpent’.

At 1 Chronicles 21/1 we read: “An adversary [satan] stood up against Israel.” The comment on John Milton’s angel-winged monster, but by ‘an adversary’ (satan) and ‘a slanderer’ (diabolos). You would imagine being the actual Messiah invoked some psychological battles - it does not say. Jesus though - as the Son of God - would have been instantly alert to Milton’s fallen angel and sent him on his way.

That leaves ‘Lucifer’. It is in the King James Bible just once, at Isaiah 14/12. The doomed King of Babylon is compared in his pomp and his fall to a star, a frequent biblical, astral metaphor. He had been a ‘shining star’.

But for the Hebrew word balal, ‘shining star’, the translators turned the King of Babylon into ‘Lucifer’. This was another transliteration from the Latin version. There is no being ‘Lucifer’.

God has declared through the Prophets: “There is no other God but Me”, the Creator.

Translated, rather than lazily transliterated, these narratives are taken out of the realms of myth, and become very human.

Satanism is self-worship. Satanism is an assertion of lusts, an arrogant rebuttal of the beautiful laws of God.

But the elite of the Beast system have no demonic commander other than themselves. Their chantings fall unheard. The power they (the real conspirators) do possess is control of the military, finance, politicians, media, law, medicine, technology, education, arts. They are kosmokrators, ‘world rulers’ (Ephesians 6/12) of darkness. Their destruction by Jesus is written: “Kings of the Earth, and the high-ranking, and the military commanders, and the rich, and the mighty men.” (Revelation 6/15, 19/18-21).

Meanwhile, despising us, they attempt their deception and genocide through ‘sorcery’, which is in Greek pharmakeia (Revelation 18/23-24, 9/21).

As for “666”, in the numeric values of the Greek alphabet (known as “isopsephy”), the word παράδοσις (paradosis) has the value of “666”. It means “tradition”, “orthodoxy”.

commandment (Exodus 20/16). The Latin version merely transliterated it as diabolos. So English translators put ‘Devil’.

When John Wycliffe made the first complete English translation (1380), he had only that corrupt Latin translation to work from. So he put ‘Satan’, the notion of Satan being long-embedded in the culture, and all English translators followed suit.

The teaching appeared in confessions and commentaries. A 1901 Greek lexicon says of Satan: “The prince of evil spirits, the inveterate adversary of God and of Christ.”

Thus a translation blunder came

These myths came all the way from paganism into evangelical teachings of orthodoxy. Jupiter simply got rebranded.

Mediaeval and later artworks, fictional writings of John Milton’s Paradise Lost and Paradise Regained (1667, 1671) and CS Lewis’s Screwtape Letters (1942), all lionising Satan as the universal tempter of man, help reinforce into the consciousness of orthodoxy the myth of whispering devils.

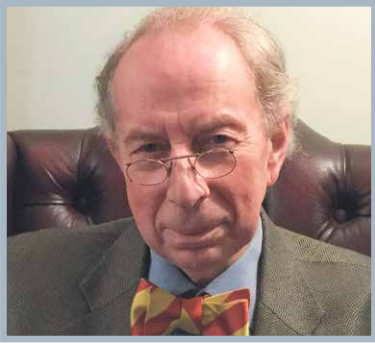

I have tabulated every occurrence of all biblical words concerning adversaries of God. There is no word or context revealing any monster called ‘Satan’ and ‘the Devil’. The Prophets and Apostles knew of no that same event at 2 Samuel 24/1 reveals that ‘adversary’ - satan - to Israel, to be God Himself! Yet English Bibles have ‘Satan’ at 1 Chronicles 21/1. So what to sloppy translators was ‘Satan’ is actually God. Blasphemy.

Nothing more shows that the Greek forms satan and satanas do not represent a universal monster than Jesus’ words to Peter, “Get behind me, adversary [satanas]!” (Matthew 16/23). Jesus was speaking to Peter, not invoking a mythological monster. Nor would Jesus have called his friend Peter such a name.

When Jesus was tempted in the wilderness he was confronted not by

Global warming lies, deceit and hypocrisy

THE covid-19 fraud was bad but it is nothing compared to the global warming fraud which is now well underway and, thanks to the Glasgow shindig, about to reach an apogee of deceit and hypocrisy.

The covid-19 fraud is, as planned, now segueing neatly into the global warming fraud.

The indefensible restrictions introduced in the name of a fairly average but strongly marketed version of the flu will now be matched with new laws brought in to protect us from the entirely non-existent threat of global warming.

Supermarkets and restaurants are predicting permanent shortages caused by mad rules and regulations designed to thwart non-existent global warming. Fertiliser plants had to close so farms will produce less food.

Energy suppliers are going bust and the changeover to E10 'green' petrol caused the fuel shortage. (E10 petrol contains food. The more E10 petrol we use the more starving people there will be. Millions of children in Africa will die because Guardian-reading loonies forced motorists to power their cars with food).

Thanks to global warming cultists, oil companies are unable to raise cash to explore for oil and gas so we're rapidly running out of the stuff. Without oil and gas there will be no heat, no transport, no machinery and very little food for those of us who aren't billionaires.

Unbelievably, and unforgivably, doctors writing in the British Medical Journal have called for the medical profession to do less screening of patients and to cut back on prescribing treatment - 'to help combat climate change'. Doctors have called for global warming concerns to be put above patients' interests. They want to cut back on diagnosing cancer early in order to save Big Ben from disappearing under 100-foot waves a week on Wednesday. This may be childish, pseudoscientific gibberish but it is also terrifyingly wicked.

'The climate emergency is the true health crisis of our time,' is the message from the medical establishment who appear to have had their brains removed and replaced with those of 12-year-old children.

There is not one jot of real scientific evidence for the myth of man-made climate change. Those who talk about flooding and disappearing cities are

by Dr VERNON COLEMAN
MB ChB DSc

hysterical and deluded. Powerful, irresponsible media forces such as the BBC suppress debate about the climate in just the same way that they've suppressed debate about covid. The hysteria is so acute that brain-dead protestors, protected by the police, happily stop ambulances.

They don't realise that the aim is to bankrupt us all, wreck every aspect of our lives and to kill millions. It is entirely the fault of the cultists that energy and food prices are rising. Household energy prices will rise by at least 30% next year. As with covid-19, everything that is happening is deliberate. Millions will have to choose between eating and keeping warm. Inflation and higher interest rates will bankrupt many home owners and small businesses who have become accustomed to artificially low rates.

In China the authorities are already rationing electricity. Smart meters will make that easy to manage in the UK. (If you were conned into having one - make them take it out!)

There's really one cause of the coming chaos: the madness of the greens, the pseudo-environmentalists and the climate change cultists.

The global warming fraud is the most immoral confidence trick in history.

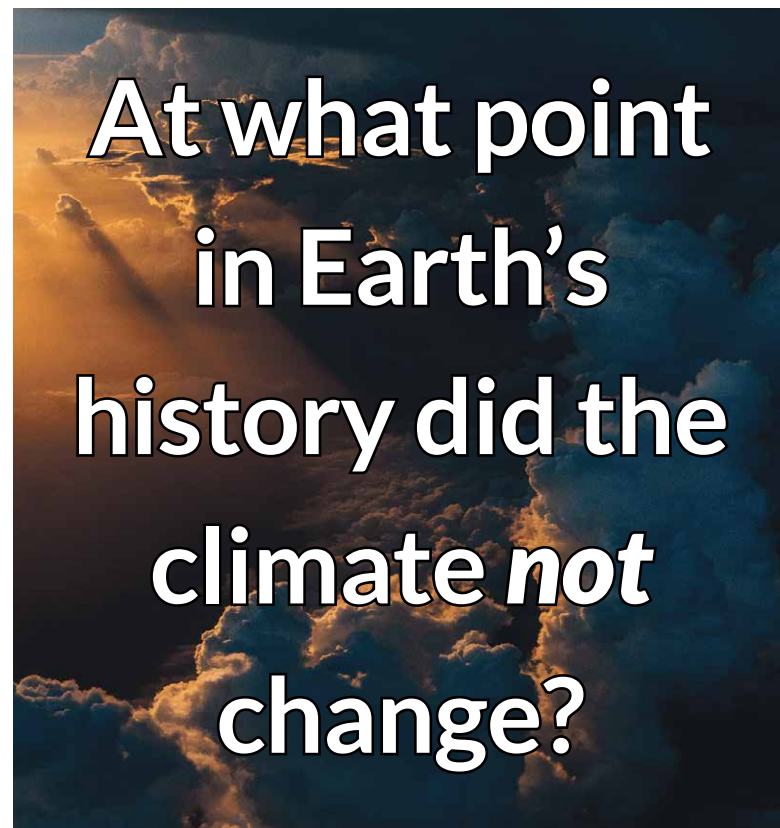

Climate nutters claim they represent the majority. But the reality is that they represent a tiny group of obsessed and noisy cultists who have been fired into action, supported by evil globalists. The cultists are either stupid or insane and should be diagnosed as mentally ill.

Cultists claim that over 40% of our electricity is made from renewables but that's nonsense. Most of the electricity in that 40% is produced by burning biomass - bits of trees.

Trees in America are cut down with petrol powered saws, turned into chips or pellets by fossil fuel powered machinery, transported to diesel powered ships and then taken across the Atlantic, carried in diesel powered lorries to be burnt in power stations. Biomass is less environmentally friendly than coal.

The mad cultists claim respect for trees. They claim that trees are essential for the planet's health. But they chop them down and burn them to make electricity. It's a definition of insanity.

It is considered impossible to make steel without coal. But the cultists say they can manufacture steel without using coal.

How?

The new 'green' steel will be made using hydrogen as a fuel instead of coal.

And where does the hydrogen come from?

It is produced by the electrolysis of water (which consumes a great deal of energy) or from fossil fuels.

The bottom line is that 95% of the hydrogen we use is made with fossil fuels.

They're going to make hydrogen by burning fossil fuels and then using the hydrogen to make the steel!

Wind and solar farms are a joke. On still days the windmills have to be kept turning with electricity from the grid. If they aren't kept turning they seize up.

The electricity to keep the windmills turning is obtained from burning fossil fuels. The building and installation of windmills requires so much energy that they are of negative value - they never produce as much power as was employed in their manufacture. Solar farms are similarly pointless. There is rarely enough sunshine in the UK and they too require more energy to make than they produce.

Then there is 'rewilding'. The idea is that you leave land alone, and allow nature to take over. The greens think we'll end up with loads of flower meadows. But we'll end up with endless, unusable acres of impenetrable nettles, hogweed, Japanese knotweed and brambles decorated with thousands of discarded face masks. This plays straight into the hands of the billionaires making lab food to replace the healthy natural stuff farmers used to grow.

Everywhere you look in the world of global warming you'll find greed, deceit, lies and hypocrisy. Carbon credits and emission allowances are a scam - part of the digital passport future they've got planned for us. Land owning billionaires get richer while the rest of us become poorer and the environment benefits not one jot.

And then there is the hypocrisy.

California, home of the all-American woke, is building five new gas-fired power stations. China is building 43 new coal-fired power stations despite the fact that the price of coal is soaring because no one dares dig it up.

Greenpeace campaigns to have the world's oil left in the ground. But a Greenpeace senior executive commuted by plane for two years - flying regularly from Luxembourg to Amsterdam to 'balance his job with the needs of his family'.

When Greta Thunberg went to America (to campaign against the use of oil) she travelled on a boat carrying 672 litres of diesel. Two crew members flew. She and her team would have used less oil if she had simply climbed aboard a commercial aeroplane and flown across the Atlantic. That's hypocrisy of which Prince Charles and Harry could be proud.

A spokesman for Insulate Britain, Liam Norton, admitted that he hasn't insulated his own home and has been accused of caring only about causing disruption and trying to become famous. An Extinction Rebellion activist indulged himself in two international holidays across Canada and Europe - travelling around 10,000 miles.

The tragedy is that nine in ten people still have absolutely no idea what is planned for them. They believed that covid-19 was a real pandemic and there is a risk that they'll believe that global warming is a real threat.

We have to make sure people know that the global warming cultists are part of the fascist/communist takeover planned to serve up the Great Reset. The nutty fanatics are too stupid to realise it but they're working for Gates, Schwab, Blair and the Rothschilds. They're leading us into a world of digital passports, a cashless society, mandatory jabs and social credits. They are leading us into slavery.

The global warming scam is Part Two of a plan to lead us into a world that bears more and more resemblance to Orwell's 1984, or McGoohan's The Prisoner, than to the world of 2019 - a world we will now never visit again.

The evil ones have all the power, the money, the guns and the media on their side, so we have to work hard to counter their lies. We need to concentrate our efforts on drawing attention to the deceptions and hypocrisies of the global warming cultists. Copy this page and share it widely.

Global warming enthusiasts are a danger to you and your family's health and future and a danger to mankind as a whole. Some are moronic, some mentally ill and some are evil.

The bottom line is that it isn't global warming that threatens our future - it's the hysterical morons lying, deceiving and promoting pseudoscientific nonsense who are the real danger.

Offering HOPE for our children's future

FOR so many years, free-thinking, critically-minded people have been raising questions as to the validity of the State school structure, and the impact it has on our children.

We have watched for so long the State school system pump out each year yet another batch of young people that enter the world with their perception, scope and potential greatly inhibited by a system that only wants unquestioning, predictable and fearful drones.

A population that cannot truly think for itself, or recognise its true potential outside of the walls of its indoctrination, can never be a threat to the system it suffers. The events of the past two years have brought that fact out into the cold light of day for all to see. The mask has slipped and all awake people have recognised that our youth have always been the system's true target.

Yet despite the largest and most encompassing black propaganda event in human history, around the country the awake folk have gathered and pushed the assault on our communities aside. Four such brave families had an incredible dream, and through hard work and a desire to be the change, they have created something sensational in the heart of East Sussex.

Introducing – HOPE: the Home of Personalised Education.

From those first four brave families has grown a community of freedom-embracing people that have pooled together their passion and resources, to offer a vibrant and viable alternative to the State schooling system.

Uninhibited by endless streams of government red tape and suffocating, toxic bureaucracy, HOPE was launched this year. It has been a complete and utter success in every way. Like a duck taking to water, our team of experienced and qualified teachers have been building and delivering lessons focused on critical thinking and investigation, and encouraging each child to express and ignite the joy of learning through choice.

As well as delivering high quality tutoring in English, science, music, history, maths and geography, we focus on a 'hands on approach' wherever possible with a lot of out-of-classroom learning.

Music and sport, alternative natural medicines and healthy-living promotion all form important elements of our strategy, together with forest school, law workshops, dance, drama and many other subjects.

Soon we will be expanding our lessons into the practical trades such as plumbing, electrical skills, carpentry and welding, with more to be added as HOPE gathers momentum, and more and more families realise the entire system is there to enslave their children, and there really is an alternative.

The feedback so far has been amazing and we have even had families seeking to relocate closer to us to make it easier to commute.

With 300 acres of beautiful countryside, we have plenty of opportunity for further progression and educational development.

At present the pace of HOPE's growth has been far greater than even we had imagined and although we have so far been effective in finding the funds we need, we are nevertheless constantly fighting an uphill battle.

As a self-funding entity we have held fayres, parties and celebrations which will always go ahead as planned regardless of any tyrannical diktats the State may bring down upon everyone else; including its very own school system. At HOPE, we think for and educate ourselves.

Put simply, there can be no greater use of our energies than for the direct benefit of our children today and all future generations. They are everything; building a place of love, warmth, nourishment and growth that will open the wonderful opportunities our brilliant children can look forward to. A future built without the synthetic and damaging constraints created by a corrupt system, to serve that system. What we have achieved so far is just the beginning.

Our youth are not the property of the State; they are not irrelevant automatons in the service of gluttonous politicians to serve their best interests, and the interests of their banker masters.

Wholesome home education facilities for awake families will form the very foundation from which true freedom, fulfilment and bright futures can flourish, and open incredible possibilities for our little ones. With a generation in a world with their minds unpolluted, open and without fear, they will in turn want that same education for their children; and here it will take root.

Our model will soon be used to facilitate other groups around the country and soon hopefully our successes will be repeated nationwide.

We have proven it can be achieved – and we are only just warming up.

We are that future. We are HOPE.

'Conspiracy theory' trope killing debate

I SOMETIMES wonder whether those who routinely deploy the 'conspiracy-theory' (CS) trope remotely have the intelligence to comprehend the irony of their name-calling activities - namely, that in labelling people 'conspiracy theorists', they are themselves guilty of purveying conspiratorial thinking about alleged conspiracy theory.

'Hoist with one's own self-constructed petard' comes to mind as an apposite metaphor for such thought-challenged individuals.

The deployers of the CS trope clearly want it to be a conversation- and thought-stopping term, from which its recipient is rendered silent and appropriately humiliated. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Those using this abusive term are likely to be so intellectually challenged as to be incapable of entering into the kind of rational, balanced conversation that would facilitate their reflecting on the nature of the term. So we had better do that job for them.

The CS term is routinely deployed and weaponised as a wily way of shutting down any open-minded thinking and discussion about the issue in question. Indeed, it is the overriding reason why the very notion exists - with the CS label strategically used by establishment interests to silence anything that challenges their interests and ideology.

The BBC's promiscuous use of the term is a case in point - not least by their ironically-named 'specialist disinformation reporter' (you really could not make it up), Marianna Spring.

Another irony is that those who robotically play the 'conspiracy theory' card end up closing down critical thinking in exactly the way they claim 'conspiracy theorists' to be doing. Moreover, just because something can be labelled as 'conspiracy theory', it by no means necessarily follows that it is not true.

It is a purely empirical question as to whether something constitutes a conspiracy or not. History is replete with what we now know to have been real conspiracies; and no doubt the existence of any conspiracy would have been vehemently denied by these conspirators at the time.

by RICHARD HOUSE
PhD, C.PSYCHOL

But it is also problematic to see conspiracies everywhere – as some people seem to do - sometimes based on the flimsiest of evidence, and seized upon merely because it self-confirmingly serves prejudices. For truth lovers, that is not very helpful either - and can also so easily be the enemy of rational discourse and sober, considered analysis.

I know some people who, because of the fraught and highly controversial nature of the CS terrain, deliberately choose to avoid anything that smacks of CS in order to (they convince themselves) protect their credibility in the face of enemy/establishment attacks, and not because there is assumed to be no truth to such theories and claims.

Such expediency needs to be thought through very carefully, however; and I think French philosopher Michel Foucault's notion of 'fearless speech' is a far more conducive approach when faced with contested and controversial truth-claims.

It could even be argued that if we are genuinely interested in the unrestrained free exchange of ideas, as one of the foundations of a healthy democracy, then we should reject the term 'conspiracy theory' altogether from our lexicon.

The crucial point is that whether a given body of ideas and arguments has any validity is always an empirical question; and to lazily deploy the condemnatory CS trope is anti-science and anti-rationality, as it serves to short-circuit the very work that would be needed in order to ascertain where the truth does actually reside. Which is precisely why the establishment delights in weaponising this squalid term at every opportunity.

Overgrowing the regime with hemp

MANY of the claims about hemp sound a bit far-fetched: the seed is a superfood; hempcrete is a wonder construction material; its fibre makes strong fabric and rope; the flower makes a powerful medicine; the root rebuilds and remediates depleted soils, whilst growing hemp plants in open fields is great for wildlife biodiversity.

Yet, all of this is true. So we established Hempen, a non-profit cooperative that cultivates hemp for the health of people, community and environment. In 2015, we started growing hemp for its seed as a superfood and later discovered the emergent Cannabidiol (CBD) Oil.

Here are just a few of the many practical benefits of hemp:

Health - The hemp plant produces one of the most nutritious seeds on Earth. It's an incredible source of protein, containing the optimum balance of omega fatty acids, 21 essential amino acids, minerals and vitamins for great absorption by the human body, and a crispy shell full of fibre too! The green matter holds hundreds of compounds, including a range of cannabinoids - just one being CBD - that are known to bring our bodies into a state of balance.

by HEMPEN ORGANIC

Industry - Today, BMW make their bodywork from hemp bio-composites that are lighter and stronger than steel. Celebrity architect Kevin Macleod (Grand Designs) claims hemp as one of his favourite ecological building materials. Scientists have even discovered that hemp can be used to make a supercapacitor that outperforms graphene to make eco-batteries.

Agroecology - Hemp grows perfectly when cultivated using organic principles. However, the UK doesn't grow enough organic produce in general to meet demand.

Hemp provides a useful crop rotation alternative, as it revitalises the soil and even removes toxins, making it a perfect natural product for bioremediation.

The problem for British farmers is that hemp requires government permission to be grown, even if it is low in the psychoactive compound THC. This is despite the fact that the World Health Organisation has said that it poses no public health risk and the United Nations claim that it should not be a controlled substance.

Since 2018 only a few farmers have been able to jump through the bureaucratic hoops to get a hemp cultivation licence, so unfortunately there are only about 20 licensed UK growers and their combined hemp growth totals as little as 2000 hectares.

In 2019, we at Hempen were denied the renewal of our licence midway through a growing season, forcing us to destroy a healthy crop valued at £200,000. This is when the Home Office decided that farmers could no longer cultivate it for CBD use. If we could have harvested the same field for CBD, it would have been worth £2.4 million. Shockingly, all CBD extracts in the UK now have to be imported.

We currently grow in partnership with farms across the British Isles for seed and fibre use, with continued unclear governmental guidance on hemp cultivation and processing. In fact, we struggle to meet the demand for organic UK-grown hemp, as the government hasn't given enough organic hemp farms their approval.

We've launched 'Overgrow the Regime', a mass direct-action campaign to grow hemp. The time to grow hemp is now, with or without a licence. We'll render the licensing regime redundant through the mass civil disobedience of openly growing hemp; in window boxes, allotments and fields, without asking for permission from government ministers with conflicted interests.

Together we will empower anyone who wants to grow hemp and learn about how to harvest it, for its myriad of benefits. A prosecution of one will be defended in court by all, demanding that the government justify its criminalisation of this plant that has so much potential.

Let's cultivate hemp together and overgrow the government's licensing regime. Get involved via our website:

Don't just march, plant

IN the UK we have a National Health Service. The very idea of this sounds wonderful does it not, that if you lose your health, you can regain it by going to an expert who knows all about health, but is this true?

Unfortunately, doctors in the UK only spend around four hours in their five-year medical course studying health, so to call the service a national health service seems to be a misnomer, as they are actually studying to obtain a licence to use potentially deadly poisons.

The Hippocratic oath says 'First Do No Harm', but says nothing about what can be done after that. When you visit a doctor the first thing, they should say if they are being honest is they don't know how to restore your health, so instead they're going to give you a pharmaceutical drug which won't cure the problem but might for a time slow or reduce the symptoms.

by CLIVE DE CARLE

Doctors are taught at medical school that any more than 1 gram of vitamin C is simply excreted as expensive urine as the body cannot tolerate more than 1 gram and will pee it out.

They are taught to believe this is true by medical professors repeating what they were taught. The truth is that some patients may need up to 200 grams intravenously over a 24-hour period depending on the seriousness of their condition. For over 60 years doctors have been using high doses of vitamin C to reverse everything from polio to cancer. This is particularly relevant now with fresh food no longer fresh, as in just picked. The amount of vitamin C in vegetables and fruits declines with each hour that passes after the picking and I suspect vitamin C deficiency is rampant, if not almost universal in our population, leaving us open to the current flu-like so-called virus.

I would like to offer a few suggestions as to how the new society that is forming, the one which will not be going in the direction that the world governments want, but in the direction that we the people desire, might thrive.

First, let's recognise which industries and corporations are incredibly useful to the people of the world.

Google, prior to censorship, was wonderful as a free resource and can be again if given over to non-profit public ownership. The same would be true for YouTube, Facebook, Twitter, Instagram and so forth. De-corporatisation brings freedom.

A strategy that would make an impact over and above marching would be to visit the homes of all the bad guys, the people who seek to damage the children and the people of the world. We need to explain this to the neighbours, that these people, be they the bosses of Pfizer, the decision-makers in government or any totalitarian politicians and their army of enforcers.

I propose that within one day we could make a huge impact if we planted food trees everywhere. Imagine you collected and dried all the stones from all the fruit that you eat: the apricots, the cherries, the peaches, plums and so forth, and have a supply of nuts dried and ready for planting. Think how dramatic it would be if one million people, rather than marching, planted food trees of walnuts, hazelnuts, edible chestnuts and so forth. If a further million people volunteered to look after the trees as they grow, not only would we have a great deal of free food, but we would be showing how powerful collectively we all are.

We need now to take common sense to the world and show that the answer is as it's always been: love. The only crime in the world is to do harm. The world is abundant; it is not overcrowded and there are sufficient resources and space for everyone to live in a healthy way. The only problem in the world is the psychopaths running it. Two things rise to the top: the cream and the scum. The thing is, the cream should be running the world but unfortunately the scum has risen to the top and taken that role.

It is a sad fact that to be in the top levels of government those people must be corrupt and compromised. To be in the top level of government and corporations one also is often psychopathic.

Controlled opposition will lead Irish deeper into abyss

The oldest trick in the Communist playbook is infiltration

As Comrade Lenin said: ‘the best way to control the opposition is to lead it ourselves.’ And they will stop at nothing in doing so.

The lockdown in Ireland has uncovered a nest of vipers willing to sell their souls to the globalist devils: bad actors who prance around with the Tricolour, desecrating the hilltops of martyrs with foul language and threats of violence. Sadly there’s no shortage of those who should know better but are willing to stand beside them in this charade.

Their role is increasingly obvious to even tepid observers: in order to implement rigid controls over the population again, and eventual martial law, the state is desperate to turn the awakening public against the ‘anti-vaxxers’ and so has created this motley crew of criminals, drug/alcohol addicts, welfare dependents and committed Reds to do their dirty work.

They are sent to politicians’ homes to harass their families and neighbours proclaiming all manner of threats as robotic Gardai stand by, under orders to leave them alone in the hope that one of them will overstep the mark. It’s only a matter of time before that happens. The media is stoking the latest fake narrative that deputies are no longer safe on the street and something will have to be done about those who pose ‘a risk’ to them.

Garda skills like Andy Heasman and Dara O’Flaherty who blasted onto the ‘patriot’ scene from nowhere with a big hand up from social media (anyone still on any Big Tech platform is no threat to the cabal or is working for them) have let their masks fall badly. One of their latest acts of desperation was to organise a counter protest at the Australian Embassy on the day a journalist was facing jail for calling a

— Vladimir Lenin —

by GEMMA O'DOHERTY

gangster Garda ‘a gangster’. The plan was to take essential support away from the courthouse in Bray but it backfired on them when people chose to stay put and not fall for the trap. The state has gone to extraordinary lengths to stop John Waters and me holding any meetings in public so our court hearings have provided the only opportunity to meet those who have faith in our ideas and our plan.

Glenn Miller has also been exposed for the establishment stooge he is. A Mr Nobody who mysteriously emerged from the Defence Forces and was able to conjure up thousands of protestors onto the streets. Who were these people that turned out in large numbers for a man who could barely string a sentence together, had his collection bucket always at the ready and was clearly working with the Gardai? Were they actual patriots who were awake to the New World Order and had randomly streamed onto the streets to fight for our freedom? Or had they come from the roaring red ranks of Sinn Fein, out of whose headquarters Miller based his Yellow Vest ‘office’ - the same rent-a-mob that turned up to the similarly controlled water charge marches and to celebrate the slaughter of the unborn in May 2019.

It’s well documented that Nazi collaborator George Soros - a SF backer - pays ‘protestors’ to turn up at public gatherings that suit his twisted globalist agenda.

Miller has crawled back under his rock and into the ranks of the useless feeders as another ‘Homes For All’ Leftist walks straight into his shoes.

Before I was aware of his hard left convictions, I was taken by Diarmuid O Cadhla’s apparent passion for justice and accountability and invited him to speak at my Anti-Corruption lecture tour of Ireland in 2018/19, when I was still allowed to hold public meetings.

He seemed genuine, though I had a niggling doubt as to how he got elected to Cork Council. Real enemies of the corrupt regime don’t get through the rigged voting system. I also smelt a rat when he told me that issues such as abortion and LGBT - which are seminal to the Marxist modus in overturning a nation, destroying children and usurping the family - were off the agenda for him.

When I started to tackle Cultural Marxism, mass immigration and how the Irish people were becoming a minority in their own country, he tried to silence me.

What did I have against Karl Marx, he asked, and why did I have to criticise him?

Well, where do we begin? Communist death toll of 115 million, end of private property, total state control, mass surveillance, the end of freedom as we know it... Sounds like the Great Reset.

Again, we see crowds of new faces latching onto a man who is exactly the sort of person the state want running the opposition. Several genuine patriots have commented they have never seen many of his followers before. Have they too been pulled from the Soros payroll to give the impression that OCadhla is the new saviour of the Irish people?

OCadhla uses language that is music to the ears of the globalist elite - everyone is welcome at his rainbow-friendly protests, he says, all races, sexualities, genders, creeds and colours. This is nothing more than a shameful attempt to satisfy his masters and distance himself from the ‘toxic’ ideas of the ‘far right’ who hold ‘outdated’ Pearsean beliefs and ‘notions of sovereignty’ like Ireland belongs to the Irish and Irish children should be housed ahead of Islamic and African migrants.

O Cadhla is just another Leftist leading the Irish further down the degenerate path of Socialism which always leads to totalitarianism and piles of dead bodies. Remember. Mice die in mouse traps because they do not understand why the cheese is free.

The saddest aspect of this is that he is misleading seemingly genuine patriots who believe he is the answer and don’t have the foresight to investigate who this man actually is and what he represents.

Unfortunately for the state, the quality of plant available to them in this current phase of history leaves a lot to be desired. When the mob attended Leo Varadkar’s house recently, one of them was sporting an anti-lockdown sign written on an old Sinn Fein election poster. They don’t even try to disguise it any more.

If I were to identify the hardest aspect of our fight against the scamdemic, it would not be the corrupt, sleveen judges we have encountered, the thuggery of the Gardai or the relentless slander against me and John Waters, but it is the inability of so many, seemingly on the side of God and Truth, to see the obvious actors who have been put into this fight to lead people astray and deeper into the abyss. In giving them oxygen, they are only prolonging their own suffering and that of the Irish people.

No organisation or political party can fix Ireland because they either have been or will be infiltrated and destroyed as we have seen with every single grouping in Ireland in the last 100 years. We only get out of this mess when people realise there is no saviour coming to rescue them - bar One - and they need to get off their knees and help themselves by standing up to the state/Gardai/HSE/ at every turn, making them cower and redundant. That is the only way we can take our country and our freedom back - not going to meetings run by government agents whose only purpose is to spy on you and your family, and who cod you into thinking the words ‘I am a living man’ are your ticket to freedom.

How to tell if you have been brainwashed into the COVID Cult

CULT IDEOLOGY

- Irrational belief that a version of the flu with no or mild symptoms for most people is a threat to humanity*
- Irrational belief that a version of the flu with a 99.9%+ survival rate is the most terrifying disease ever*
- Irrational belief that someone dying with COVID is the same as someone dying from COVID
- Irrational belief that healthy people are ill but symptomless so should be avoided
- Irrational belief that billionaires & global pharmaceutical corporations are only motivated by good
- Irrational belief that personal freedom of movement, work and free speech are dangerous
- Irrational belief that thinking for oneself and asking questions is dangerous

CULT CODE OF CONDUCT

- Obsessive mask wearing to hide one's humanity and to signal obedience to 'The Cult'
- Obsessive devotion to propaganda from one-sided State-funded and corporate media
- Obsessive avoidance of any temptation to think or investigate facts and truth for oneself
- Obsessive fear of fellow human beings and avoidance of human contact
- Obsessive hand washing and social distancing

CULT OBJECTS OF WORSHIP

- Worship of daily media propaganda about "cases", "deaths" & "variants"
- Worship of lockdowns and the permanent destruction of millions of jobs
- Worship of high-risk experimental vaccines that genetically-modify the body

CULT SACRIFICES & OFFERINGS

- Members must sacrifice their freedom of movement and civil liberties
- Members must sacrifice their jobs, livelihoods & economic independence
- Members must sacrifice their children's physical, social & mental health
- Members must sacrifice their privacy through 'health passports' and digital IDs
- Members must sacrifice their bodies to experimental vaccines

CULT RITUALS & CEREMONIES

- Self-isolation and quarantining at the first sign of a cold or flu
- Dancing nurses in half-empty hospitals and dancing police to mock you

CULT INTOLERANCE OF DISSENTERS

- Non-cult members must be treated as heretics. Cult members believe heretics are dangerous unbelievers who must be shunned, censored by the media, insulted, barred from public spaces and fired from jobs. Why?
BECAUSE ANYONE WHO THINKS FOR THEMSELVES AND INVESTIGATES THE FACTS WILL SEE THAT THE CULT IS A FRAUD. IT IS BEING USED AS AN EXCUSE TO INSTILL THE FEAR NEEDED TO INTRODUCE DIGITAL IDENTITIES, DIGITAL CURRENCIES, PERMANENT SURVEILLANCE AND A TOTALITARIAN SOCIETY.
